Transfer Demand

Convict, Guard Killed

MONTREAL (CP)—A prisoner and a guard were killed Thursday night at St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary and another prisoner wounded when the two convicts tried to hold the guard as a hostage.

Prison Official:

Stronger Action 'A Must'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Stronger measures must be taken with dangerous inmates in Canadian penitentiaries, deputy penitentiaries commissioner J. R. Stone said Thursday.

The death of a guard in Montreal Thursday, and the threat to another guard's life here two weeks ago, point to a core of prisoners "who refuse to conform to authority."

"It has become obvious that in our old prisons, under present overcrowded conditions, we cannot control the psychopathic section of prisoners even under maximum-security conditions," he said.

He estimated the hard core at 25 per cent of the population of existing maximum-security prisons.

Warden Michel Lecorre said the convicts tried to bargain for a transfer to Manitoba's Stony Mountain penitentiary by holding guard Raymond Teller, 35, at knife-point.

Other guards rushed the prisoners and shot them, but Teller died in hospital shortly afterwards of the stab wounds. The dead convict is Claude Marcoux, 21, who had three years to go on a five-year sentence.

COUSIN WOUNDED

In hospital with a bullet in his arm is Marcel Marcoux, 34, a cousin of Claude's, who has four years to serve of a 10-year sentence. Both were in prison for armed robbery.

Mr. Lecorre said the whole incident took no more than 20 minutes.

The convicts had left their cells to get supper and were on their way back when the two men grabbed Teller and pulled him into a cell.

GUARD UNARMED

Teller was not armed. Mr. Lecorre said guards working on such patrols inside the cells do not carry arms for fear the prisoners might seize weapons. The Marcoux cousins demanded that they be transferred and gave prison authorities 15 minutes to make up their minds. They also demanded

Alaska Port Hit Hard By Blaze

CORIOVA, Alaska (AP)—Fire destroyed the heart of the business district of this fishing port town Thursday, making an estimated 130 persons homeless.

Damage was estimated at between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 by state Sen. Harold Hansen.

World In Brief

BURDEN, Kan. (UPI)—A school bus ripped open on a bridge railing and injured 24 children and the driver, who were thrown down a rocky hill.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Jacqueline Cochran claimed new world speed record for women, set in a Lockheed F-104G Starfighter jet. She flashed over 100-kilometre closed course at 1,203.94 miles an hour.

SEATTLE (AP)—Twenty-two aircraft took part without success in the search for a light plane missing on a flight from Portland to Renton, Wash., with four Seattle-area men aboard.

TOKYO (UPI)—Red China has announced the loss of the freighter Leap Forward in the China Sea, but made no mention of claims made by the crew that the vessel was torpedoed by a submarine of unknown nationality.

SHERBROOKE, Que. (UPI)—City police seized 10,000 rounds of ammunition from "several occupied residences" and suggested the stockpile may have been destined for the Quebec Liberation Front, the terrorist organization which wants Quebec to break away from the rest of Canada.

1,100 LIFTED TO SAFETY

Evacuation Almost Over

By ED TREFFIAK

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP)—More than 1,100 persons were moved by air to safety Thursday from two island communities on the Mackenzie River system, cut off from the mainland by rampaging spring torrents and massive ice jams.

The evacuees included 400 residents of Hay River and the 750 residents of Fort Simpson. Previously 222 Hay River people had been moved out.

VIRTUALLY COMPLETED

At nightfall, 10 p.m. MST, Mayor W. R. McBryan reported the evacuation of all who intended to leave Hay River, 500 miles north of Edmonton, had been virtually completed. About 1,200 of the town's 1,800 citizens remained.

"Apart from one more plane load to go out Friday morning, all that are going have gone," he said.

ONE-MILE HOP

Meagre reports reaching Fort Smith from Fort Simpson, 625 miles north of Edmonton, indicated all residents had made the one-mile hop by helicopter from the flooded community to safety at an airport on the mainland. Many, including a large number of children and two dozen hospital patients, had been moved on to Fort Smith and Yellowknife.

C. L. Merrill of Fort Smith, northern affairs administrator for the Mackenzie district, said at 9:30 p.m. he understood flying had been suspended for the night. Further flights would start at 4:30 a.m. first light.

BATTLE ANGRY WATERS

RCMP and civilian helicopters, small and large planes, amphibious transport, outboard motor boats and canoes were thrown into the battle with the angry waters.

Huge chunks of ice, driven before the flood, had swamped Hay River. More than 90 per cent of the island was under water.

OVER ISLAND

At Fort Simpson, an ice jam backed water over the island community for the first time in memory.

In both cases, rivers swollen by the spring thaw at their headwaters in British Columbia were plugged by ice jams as they flowed northward and hit still frozen regions of the Mackenzie system which empties into the Arctic Ocean.

Mr. Merrill said Fort Simpson had not been flooded in previous years.

"It was a flash flood. There was no where for the water to go once it began to back up. Once it began to look danger-

Need a Copter? Just Call Jack

By DAVE COLVILLE
Special to the Colonist

HAY RIVER, N.W.T.—Every town has its man of the hour, and in Hay River it's Cpl. Jack Hunter of the RCMP.

Lost your children in a flooded town? Call Jack. Need a helicopter to get you out of a danger zone? Call Jack.

Jack hasn't had a prisoner in his cell block since the icy waters of the Hay River swept through the town several days ago, but he's had more guests and visitors than at any time since he joined the force.

For three days now Cpl. Hunter has lived on chocolate bars, coffee and soft drinks—and the telephone has rarely been away from his ear.

In addition to everything else, he has become a general store keeper for the town. With all stores closed he requisitions what he wants for the needs of flood workers and hopes the government will pick up the tab.

But he isn't the only hero in town.

Dr. Cherer Penny, a quiet red-haired man, is the only physician and surgeon in town. Since the ice flows swept down the main street and once lapped the front steps of his hospital, he's been sleeping on his operating table.

He has already inoculated most of the town's population against typhoid and is now planning his campaign to keep his large family healthy when the flood waters subside.

"We'll have an enormous problem with health then," he says quietly. "Outside toilets and flooded septic tanks have strewn the town with fecal matter. It's difficult to know just how we'll solve that problem."

Dr. Penny reserves his highest praise for Bill Napier, supervisor of Northland Utilities, and his electrical crew. Under abominable conditions they rigged up a special emergency power line to the hospital, after huge ice-flows took the main line out.

The same crew also rigged an emergency telephone line to connect vital points of command in the shattered town.

Udall Hopeful

WASHINGTON (AP)—Interior Secretary Stewart Udall said Thursday he is hopeful the new Canadian government will ratify the proposed Columbia River treaty, which has been approved by the United States Senate.

Wind, Ice Decide Fate

(Special to the Colonist)

HAY RIVER, N.W.T.—When will the troubles be over for this small township in Canada's north country?

Harry Clark, in his late 60s, who has been in Hay River since its inception, says May 28 when the ice goes out of Great Slave Lake.

Harry says it all depends on the winds. If they steady in one direction, the break-up of ice is reasonably orderly. If they shift back and forth, as they have this year, "Look out, the ice breaks like a kid snapping a toffee bar and you've got trouble like we have now."

The big worry of the oldtimers in the area is that plans to make Hay River an eventual railhead town will now be abandoned.

"Railroads are funny," says Harry. "A thing like this and they may decide not to bring the railways here at all."

100 Flee Rampaging Peace

EDMONTON (CP)—More than 100 persons have been evacuated from the small north-western British Columbia sawmill community of Sweetgrass Landing, flooded by the rampaging Peace River.

At Knudson, a foreman at the settlement's sawmill and one of the last persons to be evacuated, said on arrival at Edmonton Airport Thursday the Peace River spilled over its banks Monday. Flood waters swept away more than 30 buildings and covered the community with up to 10 feet of water.

Evacuation started Tuesday and the last residents were flown out Thursday.

Mr. Knudson said residents piled their furniture and other valuables on makeshift rafts.

"There's rafts with fridges, stoves, beds and everything else floating around the camp," he said.

About all the residents were sawmill employees.

Mr. Knudson said there has been no estimate of damage.

Sweetgrass Landing is 250 miles northwest of Edmonton.

Floods Threatening In New Brunswick

FREDERICTON, N.B. (UPI)—Concern mounted Thursday over the rapidly-rising water level of the St. John River.

The New Brunswick Water Authority said the river had reached "a critical point" and a several-foot increase was predicted for Friday.

Jets Collide

KINGSTON, N.Y. (AP)—Two F-105 jet fighters collided during a test flight over the Catskill Mountains and killed both civilian test pilots.

Fright Peddlers of 'Right' Do Devil's Work—Senator

Still in Trouble

Ferdinand Demara, known as "great impostor," has submitted "no contest" plea in charge of using mails to defraud, grand jury charged Demara used fictitious name and supplied false records to obtain high school teaching post in Massachusetts.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—California Republican Senator Thomas Kuchel said Thursday that extremist right-wing "fright peddlers" are circulating a series of hoaxes designed to "scare the daylights out of decent Americans."

The Senate Republican whip charged in a speech on the Senate floor that spokesmen for such groups as the John Birch Society and others "are doing a devil's work far better than Communists could do."

They are not only frightening many decent Americans, Kuchel said, but they also "defile the honorable philosophy of conservatism . . . as thoroughly as the Communists defile the honorable philosophy of liberalism."

WINS COMMENDATION

Kuchel won bipartisan commendation from senators of both parties for his speech.

But the Kuchel speech drew a sharp reply in the House from Rep. James B. Utt, also a Californian Republican, who called it a "brazen attempt to smear millions of patriotic Americans by innuendo."

The Congressman said in a statement: "It is beneath the dignity of a United States senator to impugn the patriotism of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Legion, the Elks Club and all other patriotic organizations."

NO MENTION

Kuchel did not mention the DAR, the Legion or the Elks in his speech.

Kuchel cited several examples of "hoaxes and swindles" he said were being perpetrated by the ultra right wingers.

● The false charge that the United Nations is training thousands of foreign troops, including "barefooted Africans," in Georgia as a first step toward a takeover of the United States.

● An equally false allegation

Airlift Saves 300 Children

ous the people at Fort Simpson put out a call for help. We thought the air force would laugh... when they arrive because the waters might have gone down.

PUSHED PANIC BUTTON

"But as it turned out they pushed the panic button and it was the right thing to do."

A flood crest was reported moving down the Liard, but Mr. Merrill said it was impossible to say what the situation was because of the communication problem.

At Hay River, 500 miles north of Edmonton, the airlift began Wednesday when 222 men, women and children were evacuated, about 190 going 117 miles north to Yellowknife and the remainder 160 miles southeast to Fort Smith.

TO FORT SMITH

When the call for help came from Fort Simpson late Wednesday night, Fort Smith residents were to be flown to Yellowknife.

By noon today only a handful of officials and 200 Indians, who refused to leave the country, were expected to remain at Hay River.

MOVE TO SAFETY

Mr. Merrill said at 4 p.m. more than 500 Hay River people had reached Fort Smith. He added all Fort Simpson residents would be moved to the safety of the airport by nightfall and all but 30 to 40 per cent of the men then would be moved to Yellowknife.

A spokesman said that a new flood crest was apparently moving down through a four-mile ice jam above Hay River. He said it was not known what effect the crest, expected to hit the town late Thursday night, would have on the situation but said that waters might encroach on airport runways, making them useless for some larger planes.

The spokesman said about 150 people are still living in houses in the flooded town. Another 200, mostly men, were still in St. Paul's separate school. Other town residents were staying at RCMP headquarters and the airport. It was hoped that 425 persons would be evacuated by 9:30 p.m. MST Thursday. This would be in addition to the 222 evacuated Wednesday.

Earlier 200 people were moved from the settlement of West Channel, the base of Hay River's fishing industry located 114 miles north along the island shore.

EN SNOWMOBILES

Women and children were crowded into nine bombadiers owned by a fishing firm and taken to the Hay River airport. Forty men armed with axes walked ahead of the bombadiers, hacking down willow trees to make a trail to the airfield. It took the bombadiers one hour to travel one mile.

EVACUATE VILLAGE

An Indian village on the mainland opposite the town had been evacuated, with most villagers going to a Pentecostal camp about four miles away on the shore of Great Slave Lake.

Most of the men in the airport terminal building were gathered in a back room where water was being heated for coffee in a large milk can set on top of a naphtha heater normally used to thaw out aircraft engines in winter.

PILOT HURT

The only casualty reported so far was a helicopter pilot, who injured his arm when his small craft crashed as it was struggling a telephone line across the west channel of the Hay River to the town.

Residents at both Fort Smith and Yellowknife calmly prepared to receive the flood refugees.

ROTELS, HOMES OPENED

At Yellowknife, where Hon. Arthur Laing, minister of northern affairs, was scheduled to arrive at 11 p.m., private homes, hotels and mining companies were thrown open.

E. R. (Ted) Horton of The News of The North said mining companies will take in more than 100. Another 100 will be housed in a recently-built addition to the town's federal day school.

MAY NEED FOOD

He said the town had plenty of food and shelter and only fresh meat and vegetables might have to be flown in.

The hospital at Fort Smith prepared to accept 42 patients from the Fort Simpson Hospital.

Ken Hawkins of the Northern affairs department, in charge of the mass exodus at Hay River, said between 200 and 300 women and children would be moved to Fort Smith Thursday. More than 220 left the town Wednesday night, 100 of them moving into Yellowknife.

MOVEMENTS HALTED

Movements to Yellowknife were stopped because flood victims from Fort Simpson were being taken there.

Temperatures ranged between 10 and 20 degrees and there was a biting wind.

"Our big problem is transportation," added Mr. Hawkins. "If we can only get them from the town to the airport we can get them out."

Patients from the town's 22-bed hospital were flown out early by bright yellow helicopters able to carry two passengers. The big push began when two large RCAF helicopters arrived, each capable of carrying 15 passengers a trip.

Women and children arriving from the town jammed the tiny airport terminal and an adjoining agent's quarters. The airport itself remained relatively dry though about 1,200 feet of the 3,900-foot runway was under water.

Senator Hits Fright Peddlers

tion that under the act creating the U.S. arms control and disarmament agency, a Russian colonel in the United Nations would control American armed forces.

● A further false statement that thousands of Chinese Communist troops were "poised on the Mexican border for an attack on California."

In citing such charges, the senator said: "What the fright peddlers have handed down to one another, over the years, is a daisy of a whopper, a puerile and evil package of fright calculated to scare the daylight out of decent Americans."

Of the Georgia report, Kuchel said there was an army exercise in that state to instruct U.S. troops in counter-guerrilla warfare. It was witnessed by 124 foreign military officers from Canada, Nationalist China, France, Britain, Guatemala, Indonesia, Iran, Italy, Japan, South Korea, Liberia, Pakistan, the Philippines, Spain, Thailand, Turkey and Viet Nam.

Kuchel called the Soviet colonel claim an "outright falsehood" which originated in a stage play, Thieves' Paradise, written in the early 1950s by Myron Fagan. Kuchel said California's senate subcommittee on un-American activities reported in 1961 that there were "heavy evidences of anti-Semitism throughout many of the booklets and in many of the Fagan speeches."

WHOPPER

The California senator said the "whopper" about the Russian colonel was repeated by Gerald L. K. Smith and former Rep. John Roussetot, a John Birch Society member defeated for re-election last November.

"Those fantastic charges are false," Kuchel said. "But when one who was honored to be a member of Congress—or even one who writes for an undistinguished hate sheet—utters such a cry, there are people who listen and believe."

that no legal action be taken against them for seizing the guard.

They began to cut Teller's legs with their knives to emphasize their point.

Mr. Lecore said prison officials then decided they could not accept the convicts' terms and they rushed the cell, firing. Two bullets cut down Claude and one bowled over Marcel.

'NO ALTERNATIVE'

"We had no alternative," said Deputy Warden Gerry Brennan. Teller, married and the father of three, had been working at the penitentiary for eight years.

Mr. Brennan said there was no uprising by other prisoners. Convicts in the area of the cell where the Marcoux' held Teller were moved to other cells.

Last Tuesday two prisoners held a masonry instructor hostage at knifepoint for four hours demanding they be transferred to New Brunswick's Dorchester penitentiary.

The two—identified as C. Lan-tin and P. Taffet—released the hostage unharmed and since have been transferred to Dorchester in exchange for two other convicts.

Two weeks ago two prisoners from the British Columbia penitentiary in New Westminster were transferred here after taking a guard there hostage and touching off a riot.

Cortisone, Heat and Aspirin All Help to Beat Tendonitis

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, MD
Dear Dr. Molner: My husband has pain and stiffness in his right elbow, and two doctors have diagnosed it as tendonitis. One suggested X-ray treatment and the other cortisone.

My husband finally consented to having a cortisone shot, which helped him only temporarily. Should he try the X-ray treatment, or more cortisone?—Mrs. J.F.

Cortisone is very effective in these cases. However more than one injection may be required. If one shot afforded temporary relief, that's a good sign.

Heat and salicylates (aspirin) also are very effective. Why not at least make use of whatever gives relief?

True, tendonitis (inflammation of a tendon) might be slow to cure, but it isn't necessarily chronic or something you "have to learn to live with" until a reasonable amount of treatment has been obtained.

One injection of cortisone already has given temporary relief, and there are other means yet to be tried.

There's another step which at times is helpful in cases resembling this one. Gout should first be ruled out. Gout sometimes settles in a tendon, as well as other places. Tests for excess uric acid give a ready indication as to whether gout is involved.

If it is, the obvious place to start is in treating the gout, rather than just its symptoms.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can you tell me what to do about my ovulation problem? I have such pain. I also swell so much that I'm hardly ever the size I'm supposed to be.—Mrs. E.W.

Excessive swelling (which is from accumulation of water in the system) is very often part of the menstrual "blues." It can be controlled.

As to pain at the time of ovulation, some women have none; with others it can be disabling. It is called "mittelschmerz," or "mid-pain." There is no simple solution, but I suggest that you see a gynecologist (specialist in women's diseases) because at least the pain can be alleviated. However, I wouldn't guarantee that you can get rid of the discomfort entirely.

Dear Dr. Molner: Several women recently have started to take plain gelatin to improve hair, eyes and nail conditions. Is this wise? Will it cause hardening of the arteries?—E.C.

Gelatin is protein—although an incomplete one—and since some people don't get enough protein, it may help strengthen nails and sometimes aid in other ways. It won't harden the arteries.

Trade, Defence, Disarmament Pearson-Macmillan Topics

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson met Prime Minister Macmillan Thursday for a 90-minute discussion of trade, disarmament, Western defence and other matters. Further discussions were planned for today.

Accompanied by George Drew, Canadian high commissioner in London, Pearson went to Admiralty House during the afternoon for talks with Macmillan and the Duke of Devonshire, minister of state at the Commonwealth Relations Office, substituting for Commonwealth Relations Secretary Duncan Sandys who is in India.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Reginald Maudling later joined them.

British officials said Pearson, who arrived here Wednesday for a five-day visit, has sought an "up-to-date" briefing on Britain's view of a variety of world problems.

he Canadian leader, guest of honor at a luncheon given by Macmillan earlier in the day, left the conference in late afternoon to attend a reception at Drew's residence.

Pearson also conferred with Gen. E. L. M. Burns, Canada's chief disarmament negotiator, who flew here from the 11-nation conference at Geneva to meet the prime minister.

Defence Minister Paul Hellyer, who accompanied Pearson, told reporters the British government is considering the purchase of reconnaissance planes from Canada.

Canada in turn is considering purchase of three Oberon class submarines from Britain.

Hellyer said he hoped present discussions will lead to closer co-operation in defence production between the two countries, especially in the research and development fields.

First Attempt

American Climbers Scale Mount Everest

KATMANDU, Nepal (Reuters)—A two-man American team conquered 29,028-foot Mount Everest Wednesday in the first attempt by United States mountaineers to scale the world's highest peak.

Word that the American expedition had reached the summit of Everest was flashed Thursday to the outside world from the base camp far down the mountain.

NO DETAILS
The first radio message to reach Katmandu said only that the peak had been conquered. The names of the successful climbers and the details of their final assault on the summit were not yet known.

Only hours before the base camp reported it had heard nothing from the assault team for two days.

THREE TEAMS
A total of three four-man assault teams were at Camp No. 6, 12,000 feet below the wind-swept peak, Tuesday night. Two teams were held in reserve while two members of the third tried for the top.

It was the earliest time of the year that Everest has ever been conquered. Previously expeditions had waited until just before the onset of the monsoon season to make their attempts. Everest was first scaled by New Zealander Sir Edmund Hillary and Sherpa porter Tensing Norgay May 29, 1953. Four members of a Swiss expedition reached the peak three years later.

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI)—California's scheduled quadruple execution was reduced by one yesterday when a district judge granted a stay of execution to one of the four convicted killers.

U.S. District Judge William T. Swigert ordered a new hearing for Charles J. Golston, 21, sentenced to San Quentin's gas chamber for the rape and strangling of a 79-year-old Los Angeles woman.

The judge said he had been informed by prison physicians that Golston has schizophrenia tendencies and receives abnormal sexual gratification from looking at nude bodies.

Swigert, sitting in San Francisco, ordered a new hearing in his court to determine whether or not Golston had a fair trial. Golston's attorneys had argued that their client's court-appointed trial counsel should have pleaded him innocent by reason of insanity.

Three other men were still slated to die in the San Quentin gas chamber today, but their lawyer said he would carry his fight for them all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Swigert yesterday refused writs of habeas corpus for the trio, condemned for the same murder, and Seymour Ellison, their attorney, said he would "go all the way up the ladder."

to the U.S. supreme court, if necessary.

However, that court had previously refused the three a hearing and Justice William O. Douglas Wednesday refused to issue a stay for Golston.

The three scheduled for death today were Joseph R. Soto, 39, John Vlahovich, 31, and Donald Franklin, 34, all of whom were given the death sentence for the gang killing of a tavern operator in Anaheim Calif.

Governor Edmund Brown, an opponent of capital punishment, refused the three clemency and called their crime "cold-blooded murder."

Capital punishment is a major issue in California, and draw nationwide attention when the state executed Caryl Chessman three years ago yesterday.

On Monday of this week, Lester R. Macmillan (D-Los Angeles), author of a bill for a moratorium on capital punishment, introduced a resolution to the assembly rules committee that the multiple execution be televised, since proponents of executions claim the death penalty is a deterrent.

Quit Riding Train —And Get $1,000

NEW YORK (UPI)—A group of New Jersey commuters have been offered $1,000 each to quit riding their daily trains, but so far there's been little response.

The offer came from Irving Malmgren, New York real estate man who recently came into control of a small New Jersey railroad.

The railroad—the New York, Susquehanna and Western—carries some 200 commuters on three trains each morning and evening, 31 miles from Butler, N.J., to North Bergen, N.J., where they board buses for the final leg into New York City.

Malmgren claims the line is losing more than $200,000 a year providing passenger service, figures it would be cheaper just to give the commuters $1,000 each and have them find other ways of getting to work.

Only catch is all 200 must agree before New Jersey Public Utilities Commission would approve abandoning the service.

Wider Limits

THE PROSPECT of Canada establishing an effective 12-mile fishing rights limit along her coasts certainly would seem brighter for the decision of Britain to extend her own limit of jurisdiction from the traditional three miles and to seek a new European agreement on fishing grounds and fish marketing.

Under present circumstances, the three-mile zone being the internationally accepted standard, it remains extremely doubtful that Canada could unilaterally claim all fisheries within 12 miles of her shores as her own preserves without encountering grave problems of enforcement.

The British action, however, holds promise of opening the way to such wide agreement on the extension of territorial and fishing rights that opposing claims would no longer be tenable, at least among the fishing nations of the Pacific and Atlantic.

The United Kingdom's move, it is true, is aimed specifically at a European solution to fishery problems, entailing an autumn conference of the European Free Trade Association and the European Economic Community, Iceland, Ireland and Spain to seek "an equitable settlement on a European basis which will have regard to the interests of all sections of the fishing industry."

The promise in the lord privy seal's statement to the British House of Commons to "bear in mind the interests of Commonwealth countries and . . . consult them where they are affected" possibly referred more to marketing questions than to extension of jurisdictional limits, since access to markets was prominently mentioned as a subject for negotiation.

Nevertheless it is clear that Britain, not content to be squeezed out of fishing grounds by the several North Atlantic countries that have already widened their exclusive claims, is determined to secure protection for her own industry on a fair basis, and it is to be anticipated as altogether likely that the 12-mile fishing limit as a result of this initiative will become at last the generally-accepted standard.

Uneasy Conscience

THE DISTINGUISHED British soldier who was in Victoria a few days ago, Field Marshal Viscount Slim, says that President Truman was right in his decision to use the atom bomb to bring about the Japanese surrender in 1945.

The former 14th Army commander points to the tenacity of the Japanese soldier as the reason for this decision. Without the atom bomb allied military casualties would have been greater even than the havoc caused at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

This is the standard warrant cited in extenuation of the introduction of atomic warfare, and it must bear respect. When a nation is at war its own casualties take priority over others. It is a fact also that the terrible power of atomic explosion had not then been realized, nor could the subsequent development of nuclear arms have been foreseen.

One is tempted to wonder, however, if the first atom bomb alone might not have been sufficient, with the threat of others, to force the Japanese surrender. Hind sight is always easier than foresight, but it has happened that the legacy of the first atomic bombs still hovers over the world, and thus makes the conscience uneasy.

Valedictory

THE MOTHER OF PARLIAMENTS will not seem the same without him, for of all men he is, as he himself has affirmed, a child of this institution. Sixty years and more he has sat in a seat at Westminster, the most illustrious of all the famous men whose voices have been heard in this centre of British history.

Now Sir Winston Churchill has notified his constituents that because of his accident last year, plus no doubt the increasing infirmities of age, his mobility has been reduced and he is unable to attend the sessions of Parliament. He will not therefore contest the next general election, expected within the next 12 months.

Sir Winston has not been much in the House of Commons since he retired from the premiership eight years ago. The magnanimity that forebore to shadow his successors by his presence, and the weight of increasing years, have caused his appearances to be limited in number. But his entry at any time remained an event to be greeted with warm and respectful ovation.

The chamber itself, echoing as it does in the mists of time so many great utterances from his lips, will for long years yet to come reflect the impact of this child of its inheritance. He has impregnated its walls with his spirit.

Speculation is now rife that the venerable statesman may accept the peerage he once declined—a dukedom no less, it is said—and thus remain in the parliamentary scene as a member of the House of Lords. There would be grace in this, but it is at Sir Winston Churchill his country and the world knows him and the magic of this name transcends any title that could be given him.

The Commons has been his home, and no man ever served it or his country with greater fidelity or distinction. There will be sadness there when his name is no longer on its roll.

Avenging Angels

ALL NAVIES have ships whose names rally the memory of great endeavor and the RCN's Huron is one of them. With her sister ship the Haida and others of their class she was an avenging angel of the last war.

The Canadian navy is one of small ships, the tenders whose speed and vigilance carry out a ranging role, and it was in this vein that Tribal destroyers like the Huron patrolled the English Channel and played an important part in other engagements.

They made a name for themselves and added lustre to the naval records of the country.

Happily as many former personnel of this ship will agree, the Huron is not destined to that sad ending, the breakers' yards. Later DE models have forced her retirement but she will become part of the "mothball" fleet, kept in reserve against any emergency which might require her to sail again.

Her flag is not struck, simply laid away with honor.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes, and ships, and sealing wax..."

By TOM TAYLOR

CITY engineer Garnett says he can't understand why so many people think of Victoria as a dirty city.

Hear, hear, is yours truly's echo. Neither can I.

Right now I am looking out my office window and I can't spot a single bit of street trash looting into my purview.

Mr. Garnett says he's been in a hundred major cities and ours is certainly one of the cleanest extant. I could think of a few myself that make Victoria a drawing-room by comparison.

Litter there is on occasion and always will be, and all power to the clean-up steps being taken to keep us well swept.

But critics don't know how the rest of the world lives if they imagine this town is "filthy." These things go for force, by degrees and it's a false picture that paints us as a dirty lot.

The only detergent-pure city you could have would be if everyone evacuated it. And then there would be pigeons and gulls to think of.

MACABRE suggestion has been made by a Californian legislator as a deterrent to capital crime.

It is that four scheduled death penalties in that U.S. state be televised as they are carried out.

I shouldn't suppose they will be and I can't imagine any similar idea being adopted here. Although any such telecast would overkill onto Canadian screens.

But excepting only that it would be the real thing—and that, granted, is a big but—one doubts it would prove the deterrent expected.

Television is saturated with all manner of capital crimes and death. With the watchers so conditioned they look on in indifferently while munching a sandwich.

And the setting is so frequently modern and real-life it seems almost to be a part of normal civilization.

Still and all the idea of public executions is ghastly, a throwback to the middle ages.

I WAS looking at a picture of a grandmother, but not the grandma type Greta puts on this page when the notion strikes him.

This member of the species is young, a mere 33 years. And of course dressed like all proper girls of that age, to kill.

Perhaps nothing sets the pattern of modern life as does the fashion style of North American women as the years creep up on them. They don't believe in the thesis that one should appear to be his, or in this case her, age.

Maybe they still do in Britain, as the Giles traditional grandma might suggest, although I suppose that having created a "character" he must give her only, at best, a new Easter hat.

But our grandmothers patently don't agree, and continue to confound the social scene with their youthful elegance of spirit and costume.

Much more attractive they are, too, don't you think?

A FOOTNOTE to a recent municipal event which impinged on our notice and our social pages.

The latest photograph of Mr. Ogilvy, killed and about to enter a country church last Sunday with his princess bride, shows him to have his brogues studied with hobnails, socks and heels.

What these must do to the holocaust one hates to think. Although this merely keeps pace with the stiletto heels of his lady love.

One thing more. If, having seen a previous shot of Mr. Ogilvy in his kilt, your eye spotted wrinkles in his right knee let it not be thought this a case of some wretched undergarment or crumpled skin.

This latest picture shows very clearly that he's wearing a bandage on his knee.

The de Gaulle view of Europe

Applause a Doubtful Guide

De Gaulle and the People

By WILLIAM MILLINSHIP from Paris

RESUMING his "meet the people" tour of France with handshaking, baby-kissing and speechmaking in the north east, General de Gaulle has undergone a new popularity test, just when the polls, at least, are against him. If the crowds and the volume of applause were any indication, his prestige is undimmed. But cheers are hardly a reliable guide to French political feelings.

The four departments chosen for the 18th and longest provincial tour—the general has now covered almost the whole of the country in five years—are, in any case, staunchly Gaullist. They all returned an above-average percentage of "yes" votes in the referendum last October, and, of their 12 National Assembly Deputies, 10 are members of the Gaullist Union for the New Republic (UNR).

A tour of the Lorraine coal basin, where miners recently ended a month long strike, might have proved a more revealing test. But, even there, it is doubtful whether the president would have met with open hostility. A presidential visit, after all, is a great occasion, and de Gaulle is a great president. The opportunity of seeing this historic personality and phenomenon of your own street corner is hardly to be missed. And this is just as true of "Red" as of Gaullist areas. A French village is quite capable of giving the general an ovation, and then re-electing a Communist council.

These almost regal progresses are to a large extent political. Party politics at least are excluded. This is "direct democracy" in action with the general appealing to the people over the heads of all "intermediaries," and speaking in simple terms of French greatness and of the need for national unity.

This is always the central message of a provincial tour, and the general after the handshaking, the meeting with the local dignitaries, and the speech on the tricolor-decked town square, sets the seal on the moment of mystic union by leading the crowd in the Marseillaise.

It is not a time for political bickering, though town councils often get complaints off their chest during the brief ceremony inside the town hall. Occasionally, political hostility is brought into the open. The mayor of the little town of Rocroi, Mme. Viot, member of a socialist splinter party, began her speech of welcome by reminding the general that she and her council were anti-Gaullist. The president, who always wears a look of pained boredom when anyone else is speaking, took the remarks in his stride and answered:

"I am an old man, who has seen many things and have had many good companions—among them Pierre Viot." The mayor's late husband was with the general in London during the war.

In his public speeches, the general avoids controversial subjects, or treats them in very general terms. He hardly mentioned the mining strikes, which was mainly responsible for the sharp drop in his personal popularity shown by the opinion polls last month. He went some way on television to admitting that his government had mishandled the strikes. But this was the one subject which might have dampened the enthusiasm of the crowds. He kept away from it on the tour.

He was on safer ground when speaking of the need to replace colonialism by co-operation. Few people would disagree, either, with his ritual show of contempt for the "scandalous comedies" of political life under the Fourth Republic. The Frenchman in the street is equally in agreement when the general talks about European unity, and does not spit hairs about the kind of European union de Gaulle is seeking.

As for France's nuclear strike force, it is not yet a controversial issue in France. The general public is indifferent. There are no anti-bomb marches. The cost of the deterrent has yet to be fully felt, and the argument that, since the British have the bomb, why should France do without, sounds unanswerable to the crowd outside the town hall.

The general does not pick quarrels on these trips. He is there representing the whole country, past, present and future. And, while he is speaking, he is proving his own personal courage. Since his provincial tour in June last year, he has narrowly escaped death in an ambush near Paris and survived at least one other plot on his life. Only recently, one of the men who tried to kill him in August was captured during a gunfight with police on the Paris Left Bank. Yet on the tour, de Gaulle offered an easy target to potential killers, despite the mobilization of strong police forces.

The president will no doubt draw strength from this new contact with the people. What

The Packback

Temperament

By GREGORY CLARK

THERE was recently an interesting panel show on TV in which university students were interviewed about the effects of examinations on them. Some of them confessed to taking pick-up pills prior to the exams. Others deplored the shattering emotional disturbance that examinations inspired in them.

Temperament is a word that we don't often hear nowadays. But it used to be quite familiar in the days before the psychologists and psychiatrists came along with newer and more confusing words.

We used to say that certain young people didn't have the temperament to be college students. The dictionary says that temperament is "that individual peculiarity of physical organization by which the manner of thinking, feeling and acting of every person is permanently affected." The second definition is "natural disposition."

It was that second definition that was the one we all understood by the word in those days when a college education wasn't for every Tom, Dick, and Mary, but only for those with the aptitudes for it. And if, when their aptitudes were put to the test of examinations not too tough for the apt, they failed, nobody bled. They just went and got jobs.

Rights of Employees

Our Readers' Views

IT IS a recognized courtesy and common practice, in giving employees notice, to allow reasonable time during which readjustment may be made, or wages paid in lieu.

However, a case at present before the courts reveals that no such responsibility attaches to the employer. According to the labor statutes of B.C. an employee may be dismissed with only the wages actually earned to date (plus holiday pay). Any employee can be put out on the street at a moment's notice without a given reason, with as little as one day's pay without notice to seek other employment.

Although federal common law offers hope to the distressed, it would be better if the provincial government could be persuaded to meet this situation by correcting its own labor laws to cover the seemingly just rights of all employees in the province.

Teenage Vote

Recently there has been much talk about the pros and cons of extending the right to vote to teenagers. Several provincial legislatures have lowered the age barrier for provincial elections but others, along with the federal government, seem reluctant to do so.

We feel, in this issue, that the pros far outweigh the cons. By the age of eighteen a person is as capable of reading a newspaper, taking a view on the issues, and casting a ballot as he will be at twenty-one. We also feel that the average teenager is no more apathetic towards elections than is the average adult—especially where his own interests (employment, education, etc.) are involved. Because of this we have formed an association, dedicated to the extending of voting franchises to all Canadians over the age of eighteen, to be known as the Voice of Teenage Electorates (VOTE). We have a fairly extensive organization in the Maritimes and are now hoping to extend our membership across Canada.

I see that the housewives say Victoria is sold short on the spreading of high-rise apartments. How right they are. I am so pleased to know that there are some people that have sense. It is too bad there are not more people in Victoria who can use their heads and do a little thinking. As the housewives say, they are giving Victoria away.

It won't be long, say a couple of years or so, until they are slums, because people can't and won't pay the big rents. It would be far better for the

Viet Cong

Revised Strategy

By JOHN STILLING from Saigon

A MAJOR rethinking of a terrorist strategy in South Viet Nam is taking place in Communist North Viet Nam, and among Viet Cong (Communist) leaders in the south, according to information reaching here. The commitment of 13,000 U.S. servicemen and vast quantities of equipment to the war in South Viet Nam, together with the Saigon government's strategic hamlet program—which already has defended some with a total population of eight million—has created what the Communists call "a new objective situation."

The terrorist forces are finding it more and more difficult to obtain food, recruits and intelligence from the defended villages, while at the same time government soldiers are driving deeper into the permanent Viet Cong bases. Terrorist casualties are running at 800 a week, many of them being defectors. While the Viet Cong still has ample reserves of manpower, it is clear that the leaders are worried by the rate of attrition.

An important policy statement appeared recently in Hoc Tap (Learning), the theoretical organ of the North Vietnamese Communist Party. This warns that the struggle in the south will be "long-drawn-out, arduous and complicated; but certainly victorious."

The statement puts the South Vietnam struggle in its global context, emphasizing that the revolution there must win the support of anti-imperialists throughout the world. At the same time, it must exploit the "contradictions" between the powers supporting the Ngo Dinh Diem regime. Chief among these powers is the U.S., which Hoc Tap describes as "far more dangerous than all other imperialisms." Next come the British, who, according to Hoc Tap "have sent many more colonialist politicians and high-ranking officers to Viet Nam, to hand over to the U.S. imperialists the experience gained in repressing the Malayan revolutionary movement." Other countries black-listed are Australia and West Germany—for sending "police dogs and barbed wire," Japan, for setting up "industrial bases of imperialism," and Malaysia, for supplying "large quantities of arms and motor vehicles."

The South Viet Nam revolution has to fight all these enemies; but the world situation is favorable, since the most urgent demand of our time, says the paper, is "to avoid a disastrous nuclear war."

On the internal aspects of the war the paper has some sharp comments on local leadership. The revolution in the south has failed to "spread evenly over the country." Although the "workers and peasants" are totally engaged (on the Communist side) the southern intellectuals and "national bourgeoisie" have yet to be drawn into the struggle. The North Vietnamese theorists emphasize that the party's aim in the south must be "to unite all the forces that can be united . . . win all those who can be won." The article points out that this is the task of the National Front for the Liberation of South Viet Nam—the political arm of the Viet Cong, formed two years ago.

Like all Communist theoretical writing, the study offers an "objective analysis" of the problem, and gives the correct, indisputable, Marxist-Leninist solution. But for the rank-and-file terrorist, to be told that his struggle "is developing according to the general conditions of the world situation" but that the "concrete conditions of the social classes in South Viet Nam" will postpone indefinitely the moment of victory, is cold comfort. His immediate problem is to survive, at a time when the village or group of villages on which he depends for food, information and occasional shelter, is passing increasingly under government control.

The most alarming aspect of the Viet Cong plan is that it has no time limit. The document emphasizes that "to secure a long-duration and continuous struggle we must protect and maintain our secret cells in the strategic hamlets. We must live a secret life among the masses in order to lead the masses." If one interprets this correctly, the Viet Cong are prepared to lie fallow in a village for months or years until they judge that the moment is ripe for an "inside-outside attack."

From the politbureau in Hanoi down to the bare-footed, black-clothed guerrilla in the Mekong Delta, the word is being whispered: "Prepare for a long war; link more closely the armed struggle with the political struggle." In this new strategy, the Communists believe, patience will count for more than modern weapons, and strong nerves more than strategic hamlets.

France Worships de Gaulle

Nothing Like This Has Been Seen Since Middle Ages

By EDWIN BOTE from Paris

At the war memorial of a village exactly like hundreds of other French villages—let's call it Clochemerie-sur-Marne—the 400 inhabitants are tensely waiting for world history, personified by General Charles de Gaulle, First President of the Fifth French Republic.

The blue-white-red tricolor flag flies from the village hall and from most windows. All work has stopped. School-children have come with their teachers. Volunteer firemen stand in line wearing their brass helmets, which they have polished to shine like gold.

As the village band blares patriotic marches, the small, fat, bald-headed mayor wearing his blue-white-red mayor's sash stands with his councilmen, the village priest and the local police chief.

Danger to Life Ignored

Although his life is still threatened by assassins of the extremist Secret Army Organization, OAS, 72-year-old de Gaulle trusted on this meet-the-people, grass roots, whistle-stop tour of northeast France. This meant travelling by car more than 1,000 miles in seven days, with formal speeches in 15 towns, and short stops—all with a brief speech—in more than 100 villages.

Unable to prevent this first provincial tour since machine-gun bullets passed within inches of de Gaulle's head last August, the security authorities organized 10,000 soldiers, CRS men and policemen to guard de Gaulle—with a doctor and blood plasma in the

Medieval Monarch

He is a medieval absolute monarch, bestowing the favor of his presence on his subjects. And his subjects respond by cheering with tears streaming down their face, by reverently touching him, by holding out their babies for him to touch.

Nothing quite like it has been seen since the middle ages, when a king's touch was believed to cure diseases. As de Gaulle's long motorcade drives into Clochemerie, the church bells peal. For de Gaulle, this is his eighth stop of the day—with another nine stops and two major speeches planned before the evening.

An awestruck little girl in white gives him a bouquet. He bends right down to give her a grandfatherly kiss. Then he shakes hands with all the village notables and with the war veterans.

"Monsieur le President" says the mayor, "this is the first time since 1487 that the head of France has visited Clochemerie-sur-Marne."

Nobody's Satellite

In the larger towns de Gaulle visited on this tour, he spoke about national and international politics—always repeating his demand for an independent French nuclear force as a vital necessity for independence and La Gloire.

and the Russians are hostile to the appearance of national nuclear forces which makes their policy of domination more difficult and threatens to compromise the results. It is why French nuclear armament is at the heart of Franco-American relations."

Messmer said European unity will eventually require Europe to take charge of its own defence.

"When we get to that point," he said, "it will be seen that the possession by France of nuclear arms will be a key item in the construction of Europe, and therefore the object of the most passionate debate."

He said the French strike force will be operational before the end of this year, when the first of 50 Mirage IV supersonic bombers will be delivered. The full force of planes armed with nuclear bombs is to be complete by the end of 1966.

Vessels armed with thermo-nuclear warheads will begin replacing the aircraft in 1968 and 1969, he said, when the first missile-launching submarine is scheduled for readiness. Two more submarines will follow by 1971.

The French chief of state alone will control the designation of targets and the release of the strategic force, Messmer said. But he pointed out that there would be no choice in the selection of the type of cities. The air force will be expanded rapidly to man the nuclear force, with a slight increase in the navy. The French army will be reduced considerably. The strength of the armed forces therefore will decline from 1,000,000 in 1961 to about 800,000 by 1965.

Messmer said the two divisions in Germany which are at present France's only contribution to the NATO ground force will be maintained but not increased. The same is true of the two squadrons of F-100s under NATO command in Germany.

With the new emphasis on technical skill rather than sheer manpower, France will mobilize a maximum of 1,000,000 men in the event of war, compared with 4,000,000 mobilized in 1939.

Messmer rejected arguments that France cannot afford nuclear weapons. "Contrary to opinion," he said, "the study and production of the weapons destined for the nuclear strategic force—atomic bombs, nuclear fuel production plant, airplanes and missiles—represents less than 13 per cent of the present military budget and will not reach 25 per cent of the budget until the end of the decade."

The current defence budget is $3,700,000,000, or 22 per cent of over-all government expenditures. Military planners contend that this proportion of the budget will not increase.

One Day Europe Will Control Own Defence, and Then . . .

that savings in military spending nearly always go to consumption."

Not only the economy, he said, but national morale demands that France develop atomic weapons.

"A policy which renounced them for ideological or economic reasons would lead the French people to become disinterested in their defence," he said.

Plane Motor Recovered

PENTICTON (CP)—Department of Transport investigators have recovered one of the two engines from an Aero Commander plane that plunged into Shaka Lake following a mid-air collision last Saturday.

Eight people—including five members of a Penticton family—died in the collision. Only two of the eight bodies have been recovered.

OTTAWA (CP)—Departure of a member of the Canadian Pension Commission sparked a row by telegram and letter Thursday between Veterans Minister Roger Teillet and a former Conservative cabinet minister.

Former defence minister Gordon Churchill touched it off with telegrams to Prime Minister Pearson in London and to Mr. Teillet in which he accused the Liberal minister of depriving Alberta and First World War veterans of representation on the Canadian Pension Commission.

DID SAME THING
Mr. Teillet replied in a letter to Mr. Churchill in which he accused Mr. Churchill of doing in 1963 just what Mr. Churchill objected to Mr. Teillet doing now. He also denied depriving First World War vets of commission representation.

Centre of the row between the two Manitoba MPs was Kenneth MacKay, 54, a year commissioner appointed a year ago for a one-year term. Mr. Churchill asked for his immediate reinstatement.

AUTHORITY ABUSED
Mr. Churchill charged Mr. Teillet with "abuse of ministerial authority" in releasing Mr. MacKay, adding that such appointments usually are given only to permanent vacancies until a permanent vacancy occurs or they reach compulsory retirement age of 70. The Conservatives, he said, followed this practice with Liberal appointees.

LET TWO GO
Mr. Teillet replied that immediately after the June election last year Mr. Churchill—then veterans minister—released former commissioner Braun Langelier whose one-year term had expired. He cited another instance—former commissioner W. H. August was released after a one-year term. Both men were below the retirement age.

Mr. Teillet said Mr. Langelier had been given a one-year appointment after completing a long-term appointment on the commission.

CHANGE CUSHIONED
Mrs. Churchill, commenting to reporters on Mr. Teillet's statements, said Mr. Langelier and Mr. August were given extensions of their appointments in order to improve their retirement pensions and to "cushion the effect of the change."

Mr. Teillet said departure of former commissioner Langelier "left the Canadian Pension Commission with only two French-Canadian members."

RESTORE BALANCE
"In view of this imbalance, it is proposed to utilize the vacancy now created to restore equitable representation on the commission," said Mr. Teillet, the first French-Canadian cabinet minister from Manitoba.

Regarding Alberta representation, Mr. Teillet said the principle of representation by provinces has not been adhered to since the creation of the commission. It was simply a guide in making appointments.

FIVE IN BOTH WARS
"Finally," he added, "there are at the moment five commissioners serving on the commission with service in both wars."

Mr. Teillet, who released the text of his letter to the press as Mr. Churchill did with his telegrams earlier in the day, told reporters that he has not yet picked a successor to Mr. MacKay. It was his understanding that in the past there were three French-Canadian commis-

Wholesale Sugar Price Climbs Again

Wholesale price of sugar in Victoria was increased by 21 cents for a 100-pound bag yesterday.

Retail prices in the chain stores remained stable at 1.53 for a 10-pound bag.

"It would seem at the moment that each store is waiting for the other to make the first move," said a manager of one of the larger stores.

"It appears that prices will go up in the near future though," he said.

Students at the University of Victoria will write the last examinations of the 1962-63 winter session today.

They have been writing the seasonal examinations since April 16. Most of the students finished during the last week and only a few have exams remaining for today.

The students will celebrate the end of their exams with the last dance of the year to-night in the curling rink. Students' council social convener, Sharon Kirk, said she is expecting a large crowd. Tickets will be available at the door.

"We had nine buses on the tour today," she said, "and in other years we have only had three."

Adult Education Expanded Day, Night Centre for City Proposed

The school board last night took the wraps off its proposals for a flexible, multi-purpose, day-and-night centre in Victoria to provide both general education and vocational training for adults.

At a meeting attended by representatives of labor organizations and other interested bodies, the board unveiled proposals for what its adult education director, J. H. Dalgleish, described as a port of combination of Vancouver's King Edward School, which provides general education for adults, and the Vancouver Vocational Institute.

Definite Plans

Mrs. A. B. Thompson, chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board, said more definite plans now will be drawn up by a committee composed of the board's adult education committee plus representatives to be requested from labor and management groups, the national employment service and other groups.

No specific plans for physical facilities or financing were presented, but the board said financial aid in the form of grants is available from both federal and provincial governments.

Great Demand

Mr. Dalgleish said demand for adult education in Victoria now is so great that board officials are considering, as an immediate measure, establishing courses which would run from, say, 4 to 10 p.m. nightly using Victoria High School facilities.

Under the proposal—which has not yet been presented to the school board itself—students would study during the day and attend school at night, the inverse of the normal procedure.

Only Regret

A typical reaction to the proposals for construction of the Adult Education Centre came from Ald. A. W. Toone, secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council, who said, "My only regret is that there are not already walls around such an institution."

Mr. Dalgleish said the proposed institution would differ from vocational schools elsewhere in that it would offer general education courses as well as vocational, and in that vocational courses would include emphasis on human relations in fields involving direct contact with the public.

Trustees said the proposed centre would require facilities for teaching courses in two main programs: vocational training and general education.

Core Subjects

The vocational training would consist of a group of core subjects which would be taught continuously and a group of related subjects which would be offered from time to time when the need required.

Trustees cited examples of such subjects in the fields of building trades, automotive trades, hotel, motel and restaurant trades, industry, commerce, service trades, horticulture, commercial arts and basic education.

They said general education courses offered might include various types of high school program, brush-up courses and any other course required by a reasonable number of adults.

John Gough, district superintendent of schools, said the new institution would not "attempt to siphon off students who should be in the secondary schools" and would not compete with the type of education offered by Victoria University.

Mr. Dalgleish stressed the need for extreme flexibility in the new centre and said it should have "something for everybody."

He said, "We're short-changing our youngsters."

He said persons are being brought from the mainland to work on the Mayfair shopping centre because certain types of trained people are not available in Victoria, and that the dockyard is hiring graduates of mainland technical institutions in preference to young Victoria people.

Head of Order Named to Post

Mother Mary Angelus of Victoria, mother provincial of the Sisters of St. Ann, was elected first vice-president of the Catholic Hospital Association of Canada Wednesday.

Mrs. L. J. Smythe of the Condy Institute at St. Francis Xavier University at Antigonish, N.S., was elected president.

Manitoba Legislature Nears End of Session

WINNIPEG (UPI)—Nearly 40 bills were approved Thursday as the first session of Manitoba's 27th legislature neared its end.

Among the bills passed were measures setting up new Crown corporations. These included a research council, an export corporation, a design institute and a development authority.

Also passed was a bill setting up a provincial centennial corporation, to plan Manitoba's role in Canada's centenary celebrations in 1967.

Some members of the legislature hoped the session would be prorogued by Lt. Gov. Erick Willis today. However, government sources said it was possible the session would not end until early next week.

Big One In Lead

Early leader in the 1963 edition of the Colonist King Fisherman Contest is Bob Pepper who weighed this 27:8-pounder at Anglers' Boat Rentals before 7:30 a.m. yesterday. He also landed a 13:10-pounder and a 9:8-pounder, all in Tod Inlet near daybreak on 75 to 100 feet of line, plane and Strip-Tearer. See Outdoors fishing report on page 13.—(Robin Clarke.)

Safeguards For Queen Went Awry

LONDON (Reuters)—Prime Minister Macmillan admitted in Parliament Thursday that security arrangements for protecting Queen Frederika of Greece on a recent visit here had gone wrong.

The Earl of Home had apologized for incidents in which the queen's hotel was picketed by anti-Greek demonstrators.

The Queen was here for the marriage of Princess Alexandra and Angus Ogilvie.

May Day Like Coronation

MOSCOW (AP)—Mayor Charlotte Whitton of Ottawa said Thursday Moscow's May Day parade crowd reminded her of a coronation crowd in London.

"In the side streets, behind the barricades, I saw people dancing in the streets. It was the general holiday spirit of the people that impressed me." She said in an interview she believes Western reporters have been paying too much attention to the military portion of the parade "without due attention to the other features."

When asked to state her reaction to the rockets and other military equipment, Miss Whitton, who is winding up a two-week Russian visit, replied: "From a defensive viewpoint, they would be reassuring. From an aggressive angle, they would be terrifying."

She reported that during her visits to Leningrad and Kiev she was made an honorary citizen of those cities. She is being given a farewell luncheon by the Moscow city government Friday, and then boards a plane for London and home.

Breathalyzer Tests Urged For Impairment Suspects

Compulsory breathalyzer tests for drivers suspected of being impaired were urged Thursday by motor vehicle administrators from 13 U.S. states, B.C., Alberta, Saskatchewan and the Yukon.

The recommendation was among resolutions passed at the final day of the annual convention in Victoria of Region 4, the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators.

UNIFORM LAW

The resolution called on the various states and provinces in the region to adopt a uniform "implied consent" law under which drivers could be compelled to take breathalyzer or similar tests.

In jurisdictions represented at the conference, only Idaho now has an implied consent law.

SEEK REDUCTION

Delegates also urged that the percentage of alcohol in the blood legally considered in itself proof of intoxication be reduced to .15 from .18.

In another resolution, administrators called for a uniform liability insurance card which would meet minimum limits anywhere in North America. Such coverage already is in effect in Canada.

In presenting the resolution, the association's financial responsibility committee said the

EDWARD SYRING
... new president

to satisfy a judgment for damages as a result of an out-of-state or out-of-province accident."

It urged adequate legislation to provide that the car liability policy of a resident of any state or province should protect him to the minimum limits required wherever he travels in North America.

Edward M. Syring of Salem, Ore., manager of the driver's license division of the Oregon motor vehicle department, was elected Region 4 president.

He succeeds George Lindsay, B.C. motor vehicles superintendent, as western region president.

OTHER OFFICERS

Elected first vice-president was Capt. Robert T. H. McKay of the Montana State Patrol. Second vice-president is Harold T. Timmermans, administrative officer of the Arizona highway department, and replacing Mr. Timmermans as secretary is William A. Camell of Colorado.

Loggers Warned

Make the Most Of Every Acre

Increasing use of forest land for purposes other than logging means loggers must increase the quality and quantity of wood they get from each acre left, a U.S. timber executive said Thursday.

R. V. Hansberger, president of the Boise-Cascade Corporation, spoke during first-day sessions of the two-day 18th annual Olympic Logging Conference at the Empress. Some 300 loggers, mostly from Washington with a few from B.C., are attending.

ACREAGE CUT
Mr. Hansberger said increasing pressure from growing population is cutting down the amount of forest acreage available to the logger. He also cited increased use of forest lands for such purposes as industry and recreation.

Mr. Hansberger said loggers must use each available acre of forest land in the way that will bring the highest possible economic return.

SOCIALISM HIT
In another speech, Dr. Orio M. Brees, a representative of the western division of the National Association of Manufacturers, attacked socialism and stressed the advantages of the capitalist system.

On today's agenda are two panel discussions, one on present-day logging on the Olympic Peninsula and the other on technical developments which will affect logging in the future.

Conference chairman is Jack James of the Frontier Logging Company, Forks, Wash., and assistant chairman is Bob Fox of the Fox Logging Company, Port Angeles.

Robichaud Says:

Fishing Men Agreed On 12-Mile Limit

VANCOUVER (CP)—Federal Fisheries Minister Robichaud said Thursday there seems to be general agreement among fisheries interests on the position to be taken by Canada on establishment of a 12-mile limit off her coast.

The minister, reporting in a statement on two days of talks with fisheries interests here about Japanese northeast Pacific fishing rights, said:

"I was pleased to hear that representations on this most important question were in line with the policy outlined by the present government on this vital issue."

The minister also said he was prepared to favorably consider establishment of an advisory committee to the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission, which governs a fishing treaty signed by Canada, the United States and Japan.

STATEMENT SOON
On this he said he should be in a position to make a definite announcement "within the next few days."

He was also "prepared to look into the matter of adequate and more practical supervision of fishing operations in areas controlled by existing treaties."

CONVENE COMMITTEE
He said he would make plans to convene the Commons standing committee on marine and fisheries during the first session of the new Parliament and would report to the cabinet on his meetings here.

Compulsory Arbitration Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP)—W. L. Hood, national president of the 10,000-member Canadian Postal Employees Association, has written Prime Minister Pearson to say the group does not favor compulsory arbitration in any proposed collective bargaining agreement with the government.

Mr. Hood notes that other civil service staff associations with collective bargaining with binding arbitration but says "our position is different."

"It would not be in the public interest to enact legislation which would have the effect of submitting civil service employee organizations to compulsory arbitration."

ON THE FAIRWAY

with MAX FAULKNER

I was born a patriot and I've got the scars to show for it. But that doesn't mean I believe everything British is best or that Britons should treat foreigners as numbskulls, nitwits or impudent upstarts.

Unhappily that thought still exists in British golf. Not only in the darkest corners of some of the most exclusive club-houses but with a number of tournament players both young and widely-travelled enough to know better.

If it's new, they're suspicious. If it's new and American, they're against it. Such, then, was the reaction they gave to the latest idea from American golf which was introduced to the British circuit last week—the pro-am event which preceded the 13,000 Cox Moore tournament at Nottingham.

Pro-am is a word understood by every knowledgeable three-year-old in the States. To the uninitiated it is a contraction of the words "professional" and "amateur" and it simply means that for one day—generally the day immediately preceding any big event—a professional team up with either one or two amateurs of varying handicaps in a subsidiary competition.

You might not believe that that could cause a row. But it did.

Certain British professionals were incensed that their normal pre-tournament practice habits should be upset. They meant that it was a waste of time playing with amateurs anyhow.

They Spread the Gospel

Well, I'm equally incensed. I'm incensed at their attitude simply because pro-am tournaments have done more to spread the gospel of golf in America than practically any other idea. They've also grown into big-business for professional players themselves.

True, it has started in a small way in Britain. Last week's pro-am prizes were only £50, £25 and £10 respectively for the first three places.

My partners were a journalist and a businessman. We didn't win anything. But it was great fun, good practice and a magnificent method of introducing members of the public to the inside of golf.

You could call it a public relations job if you like. But what so many of my colleagues forget is that it's the public who keep us alive.

I believe, despite the present petty opposition, that pro-am will grow into recognized regular features in Britain. And, believe me, when they do the same pros who oppose them now will be thankfully accepting big money.

Take my own experience in America nine years ago. I hardly knew what a pro-am was when I was invited to play in one at Piping Rock, Long Island. They found me a lady partner and off we went. Money was never further from my mind.

Just over three hours later I was richer by $1,450. I had never seen the course before but it really was my day.

Seventy had never been broken before. But I did it at night, took $1,000 dollars first prize and a further $450 for finishing third in the mixed competition with my partner.

Just Luck of Draw

It was the luck of the draw in another pro-am, incidentally, that found me paired with a Wall Street banker named Charles Cushing. Golf was a mania with him.

"Listen, Maxie," he said, "you help me win this goddam thing and to hell with the prize-money. I'll GIVE you $5,000." That day at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, we didn't do quite so well. But Charles Cushing professed to have enjoyed our game so much that he presented me with $1,000 anyhow.

Even that wasn't the end of it. Back in New York he used to pay me $100 to play a single round with him. And often, as he wasn't as young as he used to be, a "round" consisted of nothing more than 12 or 14 holes.

The fact is that the public, whether rich or poor, love the chance of playing alongside professionals. Tournament organizers in Britain are just beginning to realize it, and it's little short of stupidity that a few old-hands want to resist real progress.

The only possible case they can have in that it does upset the normal practice routine. So what? Why not get to the course a day earlier? It's surprising what brilliant ideas you can get if you blow the cobwebs away.

At Philadelphia, Ron Fairly's two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning gave Los Angeles a 3-2 victory over Philadelphia and ended the Dodgers' losing streak at four games.

Fairly's drive over the right field wall followed a pop fly single to left by Frank Howard that eluded three fielders and tagged Phil's starter Art Mahaffey with the loss. Willie Weiler Wins Two Gold Medals For Pan-Am Team

SAO PAULO, Brazil (CP-AP)—Willie (Willie) Weiler, German-born Canadian soldier from the army's Camp Borden at Alliston, Ont., won a whopping six medals—including two championship golds—Thursday in men's gymnastics at the Pan-American Games.

His spectacular showing placed a Canadian gymnast paragon of 18 medals during the day.

Weiler's snappy showing brought Canada from out of near oblivion in men's gymnastics competition at the Games. Never before had a Canadian competitor won a gold medal in this competition since the Games began. His performance also pushed Canada to its highest gold medal total in Games history—eight. The previous best was seven golds in 1959.

Weiler won the men's floor exercises and long horse vault championships in afternoon and evening competitions, finished

On orders of team manager Robert Osborne of Vancouver, the Canadian yachtsman refused to accept the silver medal for second place Wednesday when Argentina was declared the winner and given the gold medal.

Argentina and Canada finished in a tie for first place in the Dragon class.

The manager of the Canadian yachting team, George Parsons of Vancouver, said the selection of Argentina as the new Games champion in the class did not follow international regulations which he said would have given Canada the gold medal.

Parsons said Canada sent a telegram to the International Yachting Association in London asking for its intervention.

Smashing 64 For Nicklaus

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—National Open golf champion Jack Nicklaus shot a record eight-under-par 64 Thursday to lead the field by two strokes in the first round of the $50,000 tournament of Champions.

The 23-year-old better uncorked seven birdies and an eagle with a 13-31-64 over the par 36-72 Desert Inn Country Club course.

Nicklaus' eagle three on the 686-yard 15th broke up what had been a long-range paring duel with Arnold Palmer, the defending champion, who had a round of 34-32-66 for second place.

In third place was Bill Collins with 34-33-67. Four were tied at 70—Casper, Johnny Pott, Doug Sanders and Bo Winger.

South Africa's Gary Player, still not up to par following the removal of four wisdom teeth, again was putting poorly and took a 35-77-73.

Newlywed Tony Lema, second to Nicklaus in the recent Masters, had a 36-36-72 and a tie with Ted Kroll.

Three-time winner Gene Littler had a 73 and a tie with four others.

Al Johnston of Montreal, the only Canadian in the field, shot 40-39-79.

Nicklaus got an assist when one of his shots struck a spectator in the head. It saved Jack cup. Then Jack sank the putt.

The same margin separated the second and third fillies, Dance Cap, owned by John Hay Whitney, former U.S. ambassador to Britain, was fourth.

OUTDOORS with Alec Merriman

The bluebacks moved into the French Creek-Quilicum waters at the weekend and appear to be a bigger size than they have been at this time in other years.

Northwest Bay/Nanose waters are still providing good blueback fishing and some nice springs have been showing at Claydon's.

The blues are now in Portler Pass. Windy weather in mid-week slowed salmon fishing somewhat, but it didn't stop Bob Pepper who went to Brentwood's Tod Inlet at the crack of dawn yesterday and by 6:45 a.m. had landed a 27.8-pound spring, a 13.10-pounder and a 9.8-pounder.

His secret was Strip-Tearer, 75 to 100 feet of wire line, plunger, no flasher.

Otter Point and Pedder Bay waters gave up a few nice springs at the weekend, with Jack Frost's 23.10-pounder on Strip-Tearer the biggest from the Otter Point area. Jumbo Davies was close behind with a 19.8-pounder.

Brother Fred Merriman landed a 20-pounder at Pedder Bay, his second 20-pounder in as many weeks, fishing close to the Race.

Search Inlet is producing the odd fish from pretty well anywhere in the inlet, but fishing couldn't be called good. Biggest concentration has been in Enlayson Arm where they are still picking up blues, although they are thinning in concentration.

Bill Kirk found some fair fishing off Willie Point and Senanus Island.

Killer whales in the Inlet Saturday and Sunday scattered the salmon and blustery weather the rest of the week has put a damper on fishing and makes it hard to provide much of a report.

Weekend spring salmon fishing at Port Renfrew proved worthwhile for the few who got out in San Juan Bay. Oak Bay waters are producing a few springs around The Gap and Chatham Island.

Commercial trollers working outside the surf line at the entrance to Juan de Fuca Strait report fairly big concentrations of young coho, which of course don't become fair game for them until the middle of June.

The pity is that they hook into these coho while fishing for springs and some of them just shake them off the line, which amounts to wholesale slaughter of immature fish.

It is an unwritten law among conscientious commercial fishermen that when they hit upon a concentration of immature fish, they move to another spot.

Some don't do it and it is estimated that a troller in a hot spot could kill 80 shakers (immature salmon) a day.

There is a similar problem with spring salmon, which in Juan de Fuca Strait must be three pounds or more to be legal for commercial fishing and outside the Strait they must be 26 inches, which is about four or five pounds.

The federal fisheries department is well aware of the problem of shakers, so-called because fishermen shake them off their line because they are not legal size, and they usually die.

Two fisheries patrol boats have been on duty keeping careful check on under-size fish, and it is understood their presence has already curtailed the illegal take tremendously.

Fisheries officials are also going out in trollers and making studies of the numbers of small fish hooked and how they are handled.

The department is to be congratulated for its stepped-up conservation program. It is to be hoped some method may be found to cut down on the wholesale slaughter of immature salmon . . . some way to allow them to grow up to be big salmon in just a few more months.

We fished Upper Campbell Lake at the weekend and found the trout just down (towards the dam) from Strathcona Lodge on both sides of the lake. Gang troll and worm worked well as usual, but the real killer was a small Coachman fly and another small grey dropper fly, trolled very slowly. At times the lake just about bubbled with rising trout.

All lakes are reported fair in the Campbell area; Punledge and Tsolum are reported good for trout and still are giving up the odd steelie; Nanaimo Lakes, Panther, Echo, Westwood, Brannan, Extension and Quenneville are all fair; Council and Wolf are reported good; Lizard, fair to poor; Quamichan and Dougans, good.

Chemainus is giving up steelhead now.

There are still a few steelhead in the Cowichan and trout fishing has been good in the Puntzen-Bigby-Holmes-Horne reaches, with browns starting to show in that area and cutthroats taking well on incoming tides. The weir at the start of the river will be closed May 15, which will mean a drop in river levels.

Quilicum streams have been producing good trout fishing. IF YOU HAVEN'T GOT YOUR NEW FISHING LICENCE, GET IT NOW . . . and don't forget to turn in your punch card for steelhead research.

Gus Gives Double Protection

UNION CITY, N.J. (AP)—Former light heavyweight champion Gus Leonard sticks strictly to the rules when he referees a fight. So when Eddie Jones rapped Willie Jones in the choppers in a preliminary bout here Wednesday night and Willie's mouthpiece flew out, Gus promptly stepped in.

He waved the fighters apart, picked up the mouthpiece, carefully took it to the corner to be cleaned, and then marched back to the fighters.

He took Jones' arm solitiously, and put the mouthpiece in his mouth.

Only one trouble. He gave it to Eddie Jones, who hardly had room for two.

Leaf Star Far the Best

Keon Repeats Byng Award

MONTREAL (UP)—Dave Keon, hero of the Toronto Maple Leafs' successful defence of the Stanley Cup championship today was acclaimed a runaway winner for the second year in a row of the National Hockey League's sportsmanship award—the Lady Byng Trophy.

The 23-year-old Keon won the trophy, and $2,000 in cash, in even more convincing style than he did a year ago. He outplayed his nearest rival, another little man, Camille Henry of New York, by more than 2-1-1 in the balloting—138-62. Keon picked up $1,000 for winning the trophy and $300 for leading the balloting in both halves of the NHL double polling system.

The trophy is awarded to the player "adjudged to have exhibited the best type of sportsmanship and gentle mannerly conduct combined with a high standard of playing ability." Keon won it last year with only 71 points and teammate Red Kelly, a four-time winner, took it the year before. The diminutive Leaf centre earned 69 points in each half of the season.

Alex Delvecchio of Detroit was third with 25 points. Both he and Henry, a 37-goal scorer last season, were previous winners. Henry picked up 50 of his 62 points in the second half of the season as he counted 24 goals in the last 35 games.

Keon, a 5-9, 163-pound native of Noranda, Que., had 28 goals and 28 assists during the regular NHL season and capped his best-ever year by scoring seven times and assisting on five others in 10 playoff games.

The Toronto pivot, though he missed out on an all-star recognition to Stan Mikita of Chicago and Henri Richard of Montreal, is considered one of the most accomplished centre ice players in the game.

The smooth-skating Keon, in addition to being a dangerous offensive threat, managed to pick up only a single two-minute minor penalty during the 68 games he played. Some observers insist Keon never played a poor game all year. The dashing centre has been in the NHL only three years but has picked up a "major trophy each time. He won the Calder Trophy as the rookie of the year two seasons ago when he scored 30 goals and 25 assists for 45 points.

Garden Notes

Dear Mr. Chesnut...

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Every time we put on one of our Colonist Free Seed Offers, a number of readers take the opportunity, when writing in for their free seeds, to slip a question or two into their letter. Perhaps it is about a sick plant, a lawn which is misbehaving, or possibly a fruit tree which stubbornly refuses to bear any fruit.

I must ask your indulgence in connection with these questions, for they have been coming in a great deal faster than I can possibly answer them and are piling up on my desk at an alarming rate. I am working my way through them, though, and I can promise you that all will be answered, even though it may take a little time.

There is another class of question, though, that concerns our current seed offer—seeds of the hybrid African daisy, Star of the Veldt—and as these folks need this information immediately in order to get their seeds started, I thought I should answer some of the more commonly asked questions here and now.

Q.—Is Star of the Veldt an annual or a perennial, and if an annual, does it self-seed?

A.—It is an annual, blooming about six weeks after sowing, and lasting only a single year. Self-sown seeds do not come through our wet winters very well—it is accustomed to a much drier dormant season than ours—so it is unlikely that you will find any "volunteers" springing up next year. However, it is no great trick to gather ripe, dry seeds from your plants in the autumn and store them for spring sowing.

Q.—I have mislaid your column on how to start the seeds. Must they be germinated under glass? And if suitable for outdoor sowing, must they be sown where they are to bloom?

A.—Sow outdoors very shallowly, with not more than half an inch of covering. You can sow where the plants are to bloom if you wish, spacing the seeds nine inches apart, and in this case it is a good idea to cover each seed with a jam jar, removing it as soon as the seedling appears. However, these plants are not at all difficult to transplant, and if you wish to save space, you could sow the seeds much closer together in a small seed bed or open coldframe, transplanting to their flowering quarters when about three inches tall.

Q.—I cannot find Star of the Veldt in my garden encyclopedia. What is its botanical name?

A.—It is a Dimorphotheca, but I cannot give you its second or specific name as my seeds were taken from natural hybrids. One parent was almost certain Dimorphotheca aurantiaca, but nobody knows for sure just who its daddy was—it may have been D. pluvialis, as this species grows in the same general area, but some genetical experts believe the pollen may have come from an Arctotis, which is an entirely different plant, bearing about the same relationship to the Dimorphotheca as a cougar does to a tabby cat.

An addition to the common name Star of the Veldt, the plant is known also as the Namaqualand Daisy.

Q.—I have no garden. Would it be possible to grow your Star of the Veldt in pots in my apartment?

A.—Yes. Grow one plant to the pot, using 4 or 4½-inch pots. Give them plenty of sunshine and lots of fresh air, otherwise they will become straggly.

Q.—How tall do the plants grow?

A.—About a foot tall, making a rounded mound a little wider than they are tall.

Lone Coffee House Period Piece

Beat Generation Vanishes

By JACK SMITH

The old Insomniac Coffee House has reopened in Hermon Beach, California. I went down there the other night to find out what was new with the beat movement.

I'm for any movement of protest as long as it demands non-violence, sex and hot baths. But the beat generation has vanished. It couldn't coexist with prosperity. Its high priests got rich or were dragged down into regular jobs.

Yet, a few charming mannerisms and affectations of the period may still be found. Perhaps its message was not entirely lost.

At the door of the Insomniac I was met by a gentleman who put me in mind of the young Emile Zola. He showed me to a chair, or rather a milking stool. Austerity, after all, is the proper setting in which to contemplate the arts.

A young lady materialized in the dark beside my table

Movement of Protest Killed by Prosperity and gave me a menu. I was lighting a match to read it by when Zola padded up with a guttering candle.

I ordered a cappuccino royale. The waitress went to fetch it. She was wearing the disheveled shirt and black tights reminiscent of the beatnik's femme de menage. Her hair appeared to have been combed by Charles Addams. But I was not deceived. Beneath that contrived getup was as wholesome and bourgeois lass as any high school drum majorette.

A bareheaded Latin youth who had been playing flemenco on an electric guitar was replaced by a trio composed of a disassociated drummer, a guitarist and a collection of arms, legs and dark glasses known as Long Gone Miles.

Long Gone began delivering a repertoire of folk and blues songs and other laments in the manner of an adonoidal Basenoid.

I was sipping my cappuccino and Long Gone was rendering something when a man lugging a typewriter confronted me.

"I write personality sketches," he confided. "For 50 cents."

"Shoot," I told him. "I'd never been analyzed before in a coffee house. He asked my first name and my height, which seemed the least relevant of facts, and began typing.

Seven brown-skinned lads came out hauling what appeared to be sawed-off oil drums. This was the main attraction of the evening—the celebrated West Indies steel band.

The boys commenced to beat their drums, producing an incredibly musical, plaintive and abandoned sound, while a she-devil in a red turban twirled a pair of maracas and what is called a limbo dance.

The wild rhythms began to agitate my cardio-vascular system. I was tossed and spun, submerged and flung high. Mad, intoxicated, aflame.

The nomad psychoanalyst tapped my shoulder. "Here's your sketch," he said. I paid him his fee and in the flicker of the candle I read his words.

"... His eyes have an eagle-like quality. ... There's an intensity that drills right through you. ... He's what happens to a Scout 10 years later."

The Virgin Islands steel band struck up Never On Sunday.

I said good evening to Emile Zola and left the Insomniac. It's hardly the place for an elderly Scout.

Kim Novak to Marry

LONDON (NANA)—Kim Novak said yes. Roderick Mann said yes. And as of today, Kim will marry the good looking British newspaperman in Carmel, California, when she finishes her film, Of Human Bondage, now somewhat behind schedule in Ireland. The 29-year-old blonde actress was introduced to the 38-year-old reporter, two years ago by Cary Grant. And that's nice introducing.

I hear reports that the Sophia Loren-Carlo Ponti marriage-romance-friendship, or whatever the status, is trembling on the brink of a break-up.

Regular as love and taxes, Ingrid Bergman flies from Paris to Rome every weekend to visit her three children by Roberto Rossellini. Her twins are 10 years old—Isotta is the image of Roberto and Isabella looks like Ingrid. I still am a bit cloudy as to why Roberto has custody of the children. His Indian lady friend, by the way, has just received her divorce, so maybe they will soon be legalizing their position.

Robert Cummings says he is better known in Hong Kong, than William Holden who has a beautiful home there. "Because most of the people own television sets, and they see all my series on TV. And they can't afford to go to the movies and see Bill."

Next in the James Bond series will be Goldfinger. The current To Russia with Love, has just moved to Istanbul from London, and director Terence Young called to say, "we are freezing here." I think I'll stay in sunny London. The first of the Ian Fleming thrillers, Do, No, is the current big money-maker in London. The laughs at the wrong places are deliberate. I was told by producer Brownell, "it was meant as a satire." The picture did not cost much and will make a fortune.

Peter Sellers decided four roles in one picture were one role too many. And on the plea that it was hard for him to work with a broken ankle—he relinquished one of his segments in Dr. Strangelove or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb.

Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton snuck out of London by train for Paris and Switzerland where they will visit his villa. Liz has an antipathy for the home she owns in Gstaad. Chiefly because Eddie Fisher selected the place, while she was so busy in Rome with Cleopatra and Richard Burton.

John Huston was paid in paintings for his role in The Cardinal—the three daubs came to close to $50,000.

Dino de Laurentis believes he has a very good thing in Ex-Queen Soraya, and plans to spot her in two films before her role in The Bible. Hear that the attractive Soraya has been dining with the equally attractive Maximilian Schell.

For Information Dial 112-209-555-1212!

There are 140,000,000 phones in the world—now half of these are on the all-figure dialing with no interesting names like Amherst, Oxford or Mayfair. I guess there's no stopping the damned thing.

The numbers game was introduced to Canada—in Quebec—in May, 1960 and of our 6,200,000 phones, 1,500,000 have already been converted.

In the United States, there are 75,000,000 phones—now one-third of them have memory twisting seven-digit numbers with no name. And, 100 countries outside North America are in the process of changing—for instance the Netherlands, Germany, Japan and Australia.

Of course there have been

A Protest by ZENA CHERRY

objectors. Like the Anti-Digit Dialing League in San Francisco, incorporated to oppose creeping numeralsism. One member of ADDL is S. I. Hayakawa, the famed semanticist at San Francisco State College. Said he:

"These people are systematically trying to destroy the use of memory. They tell you to 'write it down' not memorize it. Try writing a telephone number in a dark booth while groping for a pencil and gasping for breath. All this in the name of efficiency!"

Frederick Litto, head of the ADDL chapter in Los Angeles advises members to overpay their telephone bills by a few cents each month—he hopes it will snarl the automatic book-keeping system.

It's an idea, you must admit. To compound the confusion even more there's also DDD—Direct Distance Dialing. You can now dial directly to almost anywhere on the continent and pretty soon you'll be able to dial around the world.

Who wants to dial correct. I mean direct. I always liked listening to the operators getting my party. It's awfully lonely now doing it all by myself.

If you don't know the number, you call information. If you can remember the number for information, in Fresno, California, it is 112-209-555-1212.

Last week my husband was calling out there but suddenly he banged up. "What happened," I asked, and he roared, "Some woman purred 'This is Honolulu, Hawaii, and if I'd said one word back they'd probably charge me.'"

As for me, the last time I tried this electronic wizardry to reach Montreal, I got Calgary—the Red Cross—they thought I wanted to give blood.

Festival Winds Up Melodiously

By BERT BENNY

Classroom choirs competed vigorously and melodiously all yesterday as the Music Festival of 1963 drew to a close.

All that remains for today is the Schools' honor performance at Central Junior High school at 8:00 p.m. this evening.

At this the Victoria North Kiwanis' bursaries will be announced and presented; the junior for $75 and the senior for $125.

In addition, Fred Laight of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will present the CBC choral award to St. Aidan's Church choir.

BURSARIES SECRET

Festival bursaries are also due for presentation tonight but these remain deep, dark secrets until the very last moment.

The highest score at the morning's choral session yesterday went to the Gordon Head Junior High School choir in their folk song class. Adjudicator Dr. Wayne Hertz gave them 87.

MEDALLION WINNER

It is interesting to note that the director of the Gordon Head choir is Mrs. Kirkham, formerly Joanne Dawson, who herself won the City of Victoria Medallion, emblematic of the championship in piano, in 1957.

While there were few enough entries in the morning classes—eight spread over five contests—the entries themselves were nothing if not numerically imposing.

NO IDLE CHATTER

The restriction stated in the rules and regulations of not more than 75 members in certain choirs is, quite apparently, no idle chatter.

In the afternoon the session was devoted to private school choral classes.

SINGING GOT NICE

Following a two-way vocal tussle between the intermediate divisions of St. Michael's and Glen Lyon preparatory schools, Dr. Hertz remarked of the singing that "sometimes it got so nice I almost forgot to write."

The last two classes also constituted a bilateral struggle between St. Margaret's and Norfolk House schools—and it was a close one, too.

Norfolk House secured the excellent average of 90 for Grades 7, 8 and 9 and 91 for Grades 10, 11 and 12. St. Margaret's averaged 84 in the younger division and 87 in the second.

BREEZY AFFAIR

The final evening of competition was, for the most part, a bright and breezy affair when high schools and, in the operetta class, one junior high school contested their choral classes.

The major contribution to the program was made by Victoria High School, which entered four out of the five competitions offered and was unopposed in one. Alone in the folk song division, it scored 87 and 89 for an average of 88.

BOYS ALONE

The Oak Bay High School boys' ensemble was likewise alone in its class and was awarded 78 and 84 points for an average of 81.

There were two entrants in the three other classes.

VIC HIGH WINS

Victoria High won all three. With 94 and 92, average 93, it outscored Mount Douglas with 84 and 86 for an average of 85 in the class for girls' ensembles. Its choir of mixed voices secured 86 and 90 (average 88) to defeat the contingent from Oak Bay, which remained 80 and 84 (average 82).

The final competition was in the operetta or light opera class and here Victoria High was again successful with 96 to an 80 scored by Colquhoun Junior High School Glee Club.

Results:

SCHOOL CHORAL CLASSES
Class 11, Glee Club choir, Grade 11 (one entry): 1. St. James Douglas School, 81.
Class 12, Composite choir in Grade 12 (one entry): 1. George Jay School, 81.

Class 14, Junior High School folk song (two entries): 1. Gordon Head, 87; 2. Lansdowne, 84.
Class 15, Junior High School Girls' choir (three entries): 1. Central, 81; 2. St. Newton, 81; 3. J. J. Willis, 80.
Class 16, S.S.A. Private Schools, intermediate (two entries): 1. St. Michael's, 80; 2. Glenora, 80.
Class 17, Private Schools, primary or nursery class (two entries): 1. Norfolk House, 84; 2. St. Paul's, 84.

Rusk Plans Talks With Nehru

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk Thursday conferred with Pakistan President Mohammed Ayub Khan on the Kashmir dispute and then flew to India where he will meet with Prime Minister Nehru today.

Informed sources here said Rusk was making a final attempt to bring the two sides closer together before their negotiators hold a sixth and possibly last round of meetings May 15.

Rusk had indicated he would take up the Kashmir dispute and the issue of Western arms aid to India with the Pakistani leader.

The sources said Rusk would make an attempt to soften Nehru's stand on Kashmir, the state between India and Pakistan which both nations claim.

Fisheries Aide Named

Maurice Houghton has been appointed assistant chief of the newly-created department of fisheries' protection branch in the Pacific area, area director of fisheries W. R. Houghton recently announced.

Growing responsibilities within the protection branch brought about the need for the post, Mr. Houghton said in a release.

Mr. Houghton, of Burnaby, has been a fisheries officer since 1947, in 1958 was appointed marine superintendent.

Driver Guilty

Negroes March

2,000 Stage Biggest Segregation Protest

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Birmingham's Negro population—apparently acting on command of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.—Thursday staged the largest segregation protest demonstration in the history of the deep south.

Estimates of the number arrested ranged as high as 700, but reporters on the scene counted only about 400.

At least 2,000 Negroes were milling in the streets at the height of the protest.

The demonstration lasted four hours, during which time wave after wave of Negroes—many of them juveniles who had skipped school—marched toward the downtown area singing.

In each instance police were waiting for them at roadblocks and promptly herded the demonstrators into paddy wagons.

When they ran out of police wagons, school buses were used to transport the demonstrators to city jail.

There was no violence, although in one instance motorcycle patrolmen drove their vehicles up over curbs and chased a group of marchers who attempted to flee when they were stopped. All were corralled and taken into custody.

Although police obviously had been tipped off to the demonstrations they apparently were not prepared for a

Bands Share In Concert

There will be a joint band concert at North Saanich High School this evening at 8 p.m. when the North Saanich and MacPherson Park High School bands share a program.

This takes the place of the band and variety concert formerly scheduled for last Saturday.

protest of the size that developed.

And before they could get fully organized to stop the marchers, pickets with signs reading Segregation Sold Here, and No Dignity, No Dollars, appeared at downtown stores. They too were arrested.

Hundreds of Negroes poured out into the streets to watch the marchers and shout encouragement.

Police, fearing the situation would get out of hand, called for help from the fire department and the sheriff's office.

Seven fire trucks responded, and firemen dressed in helmets and boots quickly hooked up hoses to fire hydrants and stood by waiting for the command to use them.

At this point Negroes were lined five and six deep along the sidewalks along about a six-block area of the Negro section. Many began drifting away when the hoses were attached. Eventually firemen rolled up the hoses and left.

Welfare Needs 'Vote Tag'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Child welfare should be a political issue, says Mrs. E. W. Gross of Vancouver, child welfare chairman of the B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation.

She told the closing session of the Child Welfare League of America here Wednesday that B.C. needs more treatment centres but won't get them unless it is made politically significant.

She added: "People must demand the service and treatment which are needed for children from their M.P.A."

"The service needed must have a vote tag on it."

France Advances Troop Recall Date

ALGIERS (Reuters) — France has agreed to advance the date of withdrawal of her troops in Algeria, it was announced here Thursday.

A communique on talks between Premier Ahmed Ben Bella and the French State Secretary for Algerian Affairs, Jean de Broglie, said the date of repatriation would be brought forward from July 1, 1965, to the latter end of 1964.

Troops in the Constantine area will be withdrawn even earlier—before the end of 1963, the communique said.

The communique reference followed immediately a statement that the two ministers had reviewed questions relating to the use of France's Sahara bases, but did not indicate the result of these discussions.

Peterson Rapped

Labor's Point Missed

A reply from the B.C. labor minister to Victoria Labor Council criticism of the new tradesmen's qualification legislation does not come to grips with the council's objections, a council official says.

A letter from Labor Minister Peterson was read at Wednesday's meeting of the council. The council objects to provisions of the new legislation which remove from unions and give to the government the right to set standards of qualification for tradesmen.

PARLETS PROMISED

The letter indicated labor and management groups would be consulted in the course of applying the new Apprentices and Tradesmen's Qualification Act. But Ald. A. W. Toome said after the meeting the letter did not deal with the council's desire for consultation with labor over the basic policy of the act.

THANKSGIVING

Delegates learned the Region-Labor Council of Greater Victoria will promote an Industrial Thanksgiving Sunday May 19.

Highlight of the day will be a general service in Christ Church Cathedral at which Rev. E. W. Scott, Anglican director of special services for the diocese of Rupert's Land, will preach.

LABOR FORUM

The service will be followed by a labor forum, with a panel of religious and labor leaders, in the Memorial Hall at the cathedral.

Delegates also:

● Decided to ask for balance sheets showing expenditures of all charitable organizations seeking donations from it.

● Voted to donate a trophy to the Victoria International Film Festival, which will show some 80 films between July 1 and Aug. 15 this year.

● Learned late applications for examination by Workmen's Compensation Board doctors are more likely to get swift attention if the injured person's doctor, rather than the person himself, makes the application.

● Heard share-purchase and pledges still are needed for the new Victoria labor hall now being built;

● Asked its legislative committee to make a full investigation of the B.C. government's homeowner's grant, which one delegate described as politically motivated and discriminatory.

Safe ashore after near-fatal ordeal in numbing waters of Juan de Fuca Strait, 18-year-old Colin Armstrong, Richmond, B.C., is taken to naval ambulance at Ogden Point. He was

Six Men Saved After Boat Flips

By DON GAIN

Six naval seamen were plucked from a watery death in the icy strait of Juan de Fuca yesterday morning when their 27-foot whaler capsized in seas whipped to a fury by gale-force winds.

One of the men, OS R. Nordin, 17, of Richmond, B.C., is under observation at HMCS Naden Hospital. The other five men were released after examination.

The men were tossed into the bone-chilling waters a quarter-mile south of Brodiche Ledge about 9:30 a.m., when winds were estimated at 42 miles an hour.

CLUNG TO BOAT

Despite the numbing cold they managed to cling to their overturned boat until help arrived.

They had been under surveillance by the navy harbor-craft Oriole III, and the CNR train ferry Canora.

The Oriole III rushed to the stricken boat while the Canora stood by and summoned help.

TUG ANSWERS

The tug MT3 of the Warren Tug Co., in answer to the summons, sped to the scene.

"We were about a mile away from them when they went over," said PO Edward Aubrey, skipper of Oriole III. "It took us about five minutes to get to them."

TOOK MEN ABOARD

"The tug got there right after we did," he said. "They took four of the men and we took two."

Rescue operations were hampered by the high wind and waves. Two of the men tangled in the sails and nearly went under during the rescue.

TO JOIN SHIP

The men had left Esquimalt Harbor about 8 a.m. for a two-day sailing trip to Nanos Bay, north of Nanaimo. They were to join their ship, destroyer-cruiser HMCS Fraser, and had been given permission to make the trip.

"We were okay until we got out of the harbor," said 18-year-old OS Colin Armstrong of Richmond, B.C. "Then we took in too much water."

HAPPENED TOO FAST

"The waves kept coming in over the sides and we filled up. It all happened too fast," PO Edward Jones said.

"We were being watched all the time we were out there," said Sub-Lieut. P. T. Payne, who was in charge of the party.

"We were on our way to check their progress because of the weather," PO Aubrey of Oriole III said. "They were trying to shorten sail and the wind was so strong that it turned them over."

One of the men fell back

Shivering from icy bath in frigid waters of Juan de Fuca Strait, OS J. Buczkowski, 20, of Vancouver, is wrapped in blankets before trip to HMCS Naden hospital. He is helped by LS James Balfour and firefighter R. E. Taylor aboard navy harbor-craft Oriole III.—(William A. Boucher) into the water during rescue operations, swallowing a quantity of salt water.

Darrel Warren, skipper of the MT3, saw him fall back into the water as he neared the scene.

"He was about half-way up when he dropped down," he said. But this other fellow—I think he was the petty officer (Ted Jones)—grabbed him and held him up until we got along side."

Another Warren tug, the We Two, skippered by Kenneth Warren, arrived on the scene just behind the MT3 and towed the capsized navy whaleboat back to Ogden Point.

Other members of the boat's crew were L. W. Kirateln, 19, of Camrose, Alta., and J. Buczkowski, 20, of Vancouver.

Not Harmful

Pesticide Work Defended

By JUDGEN HERSE

Pesticide spraying is only carried out when timber is in danger of death, says a federal department of forestry entomologist in Victoria.

In contrast to several Victoria scientists interviewed recently by The Daily Colonist, J. M. Kinghorn—who is also a fully qualified forester—holds that pesticides, insecticides or poison sprays are neither harmful nor undesirable if applied in the right manner.

Scientists Claim

Scientists have said that along with pests, DDT and other poison sprays have killed ants, wasps, spiders, millions and millions of bees, and thousands of fish throughout Vancouver Island.

These undesired side effects of the pesticides have at times reached proportions that give cause for alarm, say Victoria beekeepers, plant pathologists, entomologists and fishery experts.

Case for Defence

Here is Mr. Kinghorn's case for the defence of pesticides:

• DDT has been used for 18 years without too many persons "keeling over" as a direct or indirect cause.

• Every year a new problem comes up with forest pests threatening trees.

• Scientist have predicted that, if pesticides were eliminated today, food production in the U.S.—and presumably Canada too—would be down 50 per cent.

• Rivers where fish have died from pesticide spraying can be restocked and rehabilitated within a few years.

• A forest destroyed by a pest takes 150 to 250 years to be replaced by new growth.

• Careful timing of pesticide spraying programs will not necessarily kill predators.

• Pesticides have stamped out malaria in North America, have increased, for example, crops of potatoes and tomatoes.

• Forest pests, through their one-year generation, have only a remote chance of developing a resistance to poison sprays.

This is the story of pesticide spraying in B.C. forests:

No Re-spraying

Of 53,800,000 acres of total mature forest—and of 137,000,000 total acres of commercial forest land—250,000 acres have been sprayed, and no area has been re-sprayed, Mr. Kinghorn says.

"That program is 0.2 per cent of the total forest area in B.C. that has been sprayed over a period of 16 years. Break this figure down into a yearly percentage and it becomes infinitesimal."

This year, Mr. Kinghorn says, there will be no large-scale program of pesticide spraying against defoliating insects, only experimental work with the pest control committee of the B.C. Loggers Association is being carried out.

In Switzerland

The wonder pesticide being tried out in Switzerland's phosphenon, used against the hemlock looper pest.

"We hope it will permit us to spray forests in B.C. without adverse effects on fish," Mr. Kinghorn says.

"The toxic effects of phosphenon on fish has been tested to be about 1/300th that of DDT."

Use Predators

Aside from these pesticide programs, Mr. Kinghorn says, parasites and predators are being used in the fight against forest pests. Tests are already in progress.

However, forest spraying against pests constitutes only a portion of potential danger to necessary insects and animals.

Farmers and gardeners—both professional and amateur—have been known over the years to freely use poison sprays, not only killing pests but predators and other insects as well.

In many cases in B.C., spray equipment has been washed out in streams, instantly killing off the fish population. Latest alleged case reported was Cooper's Cove at Sooke last week.

I. L. Withler, provincial fisheries biologist who investigated the latter case and supplied this information, says the country is full of people who are worried about this situation (of excessive poison spray use).

"But they don't know where to turn for help," he says.

"What we need in Canada is a central clearing house and a research group composed of all kinds of scientists, industrialists and authorities from all branches of industry and government to look into this poison spray situation and its possible side effects on animals or humans.

"Something like the pollution control board."

City Holds Tax Line At Mill Rate of 55

By IAN STREET

Queenie Stays On

An orgy of last minute budget slashing yesterday enabled city council to hold tax line at 55 mills, paving the way for submission of a capital budget to a vote of Victoria ratepayers later this year.

The four mills chopped from the $10,571,543 provisional budget was made up of an additional $115,000 in revenue and cuts in expenditures totalling $264,000.

City council will meet Thursday to introduce a bylaw for passage of this year's record budget of $10,491,543.

It took an all-out effort in the final stages to achieve this immediate end which involved:

Removing special items from the budget totalling some $118,000, dipping into reserves for another $100,000, and deciding on short-term borrowing of another $25,000 to put more city-owned property on the market.

A minority on council, notably Ald. A. W. Toome and Ald.

J. L. W. McLean, maintained that it had gone too far in absorbing the entire three-mill increase in school and salary costs to keep taxes at the 1962 level.

A factor that loomed large in the minds of most aldermen during the final stages of budget deliberations was the 4.5 mill tax increase which is faced in any event by downtown property owners who backed the construction of two civic parking facilities.

The decision to submit a capital loan program to ratepayers in the near future was taken by council before final culling of special items began.

Boy 'Hired' At Arena, Molested

An 11-year-old boy was molested by a man at Memorial Arena last night and two more were accosted by the same man.

The man, described as about 22 years old, five feet, eight inches in height and of medium build, offered to hire two boys as helpers at the arena.

When one of the boys accepted he was taken inside the arena and molested, but not harmed, by the man.

Another boy was accosted by a woman of the same description about an hour later on Finlayson Street, but the boy ignored the man and was not harmed.

The man was reported to have been wearing a short grey jacket and grey pants.

Building Total Climbs

Construction activity in Greater Victoria soared past the $5,000,000 mark in April, according to figures available yesterday at the four municipal building inspectors' offices.

On a dollar basis Saanich more than doubled the value of permits issued by Victoria, because of a $2,359,000 federal forestry research laboratory to be built on Burnside north of the Trans-Canada Highway.

Victoria issued 525 permits in April for construction valued at $1,531,772.

Permits were given for four apartments valued at $450,000, two office buildings worth $352,500, city parking facilities on Yates which will cost $182,000, five dwellings worth $38,750 and one church valued at $18,000.

It brought the four-month total to 2,045 permits which were worth $4,292,931.

FORTY DWELLINGS

Saanich officials gave out 98 permits worth $3,122,876 in April, 40 of them for dwellings worth $568,900, one for the forestry laboratory and one for a $103,701 addition to Tolmie Elementary School.

A four-month total in that municipality was 408 permits worth $5,217,043, including 177 dwellings valued at $2,365,169.

Esquimalt issued 16 permits valued at $455,135 in April. Three of them were for dwellings worth $41,000 and one was for a 64-suite apartment valued at $400,000.

The four-month total was 81 permits worth $639,545.

In Oak Bay, 11 permits worth $220,200 were issued in April, including four dwellings valued at $72,000, and 148 permits worth $632,967 were given in four months, 25 of them for dwellings worth $431,796.

Later Consideration

Several of these items were referred for later consideration, but no decision was taken on the content or timing of the program which is expected to be put to voters before the end of the year.

Council was warned that for every $1,000,000 borrowed under a capital program debt charges at present interest rates would add one mill to taxes each year for the next 20 years, if that is the life of the debenture issue.

Mayor R. B. Wilson said he was optimistic that the federal government would shortly establish a fund providing municipalities with low-interest loans for capital projects.

Hardest hit by the budget

Further Action Halted

Action taken by council will stop all further action this year on the urban renewal schemes mooted for the Blanshard area as well as Chinatown and Victoria West.

It is likely, however, that the full $500,000 estimated city share of the cost of the Blanshard project, plus what smaller amounts are involved in the other schemes, will be placed in the capital budget.

Other major items mentioned for inclusion in the capital program are the $1,000,000 Blanshard Street extension scheme, extension of the sewer outfall at Clover Point, and what is expected to be major renovations to the police station recommended by former RCMP superintendent George Archer.

Council earlier approved a police department budget of just under $600,000. The increase of some $75,000 over 1962 included $25,000 placed in special reserve fund to implement some of the urgent recommendations of the still-secret Archer report.

Other extra funds will be spent on three extra men for the 100-member force, three police dogs, and a breathalyzer for quick and accurate readings of alcohol in the blood stream.

The annual $2,500 grant to the chamber of commerce was cut from the budget because no request for it had been received by the city. Aldermen agreed that if the request comes in late the money may have to be found in contingencies.

The contingencies vote was later reduced to some $63,000 when council found itself with just over $52,000 remaining to be cut to hold the tax line. The bulk of this amount was taken from $50,000 of the 1963 budget surplus which had been earmarked for use next year.

Among items referred for consideration in the capital budget was a city ambulance. Ald. Toome's plea for inclusion in the current budget of an ambulance-rescue truck to be operated by the fire department got little support from the rest of council.

Also up for inclusion in the program is extension of the traffic light control system from emergency vehicles which could cost as much as $50,000; a new firehall at John and Turner costing $50,000; improvements to Topaz Park playing fields and a comfort station for Gonzales Beach.

Help Needed in Costly Mental Health Battle

Who is Eddie? He is a deeply emotionally disturbed boy of 8 whose right leg is deformed and will have to be amputated.

But Eddie also stands as a symbol for a classic, lovable imp and also for 420 deeply mentally disturbed children or for 1,400 children who require some specialized mental help.

This was the picture drawn by James Mair, director of the Seven Oaks Residential Treatment Centre for children and one of four panel members discussing mental illness at Victoria High School last night.

Sponsored by the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce, the panel discussion —first of its kind in Canada—was moderated by Maurice Cowden.

Mr. Mair said as many as 20 per cent of Greater Victoria's 28,000 school students may require special help. The answer to the problem, he said, was sixfold:

• Treatment at home.

• Foster home service with case work.

• Benign open door institutions for group work.

• Open-door institutions such as Seven Oaks, with schools.

• Closed, self-contained institutions, and

• Long-term closed institutions such as state hospitals.

Robert Dudley, executive director of the Canadian Mental Health Association, presented these facts "as against certain myths on mental health."

• Fifty per cent of all hospital beds are occupied by mental health patients.

• Ten per cent of Canada's population has mental problems.

• Every day in Canada, 75 people are institutionalized;

In some parts of Canada, suicide deaths outnumber other deaths.

• It costs $10,000 an hour to care for mental patients in Canada.

• The annual bill comes to $310,000,000.

"We need your help to fight the battle," Mr. Dudley said.

Also on the panel were C. B. Watson, assistant to the provincial deputy minister of health services, and Dr. Ian Keating, a Victoria psychiatrist.

In the discussion period, the panel discussed such matters as what the problems of the mentally ill are and what constitutes normality in a human being. A lively question-and-answer period rounded the evening.

Miss Janet Haverty, centre, is congratulated by Nigella Phillips and Lt.-Cmdr. W. R. Howard of the CMHA, on graduation from the Canadian Mental Health Association's volunteer course, Monday night. The class of 20 volunteers is now qualified to work on the ward in a supplementary capacity. The four-month course was taken in conjunction with the staff of the Bay Pavilion. A tea will be held Saturday afternoon to mark the end of Mental Health Week, April 28 to May 4. The affair will be held at 2316 Lee Avenue, from 2 to 5 p.m. There will be a home baking and sewing table. —(Bud Kinsman)

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am a travelling man who leaves home on Monday and returns on Friday. This has been my routine for 12 years.

My wife knew this when I married her eight years ago and she said it was okay with her—that she would never be about my being away. Her father worked on the railroad so she was accustomed to it.

She has kept her promise, but now I think maybe I have other problems.

Last night I arrived home a few hours earlier than usual. The place was filled with cigar smoke. There was a cigar butt in the ash tray. My wife was washing her hair. When I asked about the smoke in the house and showed her the cigar butt she said, "I've always wanted to smoke a cigar... so tonight I tried one."

What do you think?

—LOSING BY A NOSE.

Dear Nore: Any woman who can think THAT fast is going to be awfully hard to outsmart. In the absence of other evidence accept her explanation—and keep your eyes open.

Dear Ann Landers: Our daughter received a party invitation in the mail yesterday.

She said, "Isn't this cute?" and handed it to me. I was shocked to see a line-written across the bottom of the invitation which read—"Bring your own bottle."

Marie is a college freshman—but only 17. The party, she argued, is being given by one of the "best-rated girls in town." Her father is a doctor and her mother is one of the society leaders. They live in a mansion with a three-car garage.

I told her I didn't care about their garage and that she wasn't going to the party.

There was no arguing. Marie muttered "Okay," and that was the end of it.

My husband says maybe I am wrong. He claims perhaps we should allow our daughter to be exposed to all sides of life, and make her own choices. What is your opinion?

—LOUISIANA PURCHASE.

Dear Purchase: I'm with you, mother. It's bad enough when 17-year-olds go to parties that somehow "turn out" to be drunken brawls. But to knowingly allow your teenager to attend a party to which she has been instructed to "bring her own bottle," would be stupid.

Teenage drinking is assuming dangerous proportions and it's getting worse. Parents who allow kids to make such "choices" are merely covering up for the fact that they have lost control.

Ashtrays Solve Problem

By JILL ARLETT

The moment I light up a cigarette, invariably there is not an ashtray to be found anywhere in the house.

Eventually the ash grows to a good one-and-a-half inches, and there I am—stranded.

This predicament not only happens in my own house, but in other people's houses also. I am getting tired of discreetly hiding the ash under the living room's best chair or dropping it in my empty glass.

Especially when sometimes my glass isn't quite empty.

The answer, of course, to this common enough problem is to scatter your entire house with ashtrays. And this can be done quite easily—and artistically—if you visit the store I was in yesterday.

Modern designs and shapes form an attractive selection of colorful ashtrays—large enough to hold a good 20 or 30 butts. They are priced at 29 cents and 49 cents.

Ashtrays that "empty themselves" by means of a twirling disc in the centre are just the thing for the heavy smoker who is constantly having to get up and empty out the butts. Price is $1.98.

Or if you need to stock up on several ashtrays, you'll save a lot of money if you purchase their glass ashtrays (in various shapes and sizes) priced from just 13 cents.

Matches, too, always seem to be in short supply, and this store has an almost unending supply of match boxes and cigarette lighters.

If you want to get fancy about it, you can "personalize" your matches. Kits of 12 cards of matches (with vinyl cover), and a pencil equipped to write your name in gold, is selling for $1.49. Larger boxes of 50 are only $2.25.

Colors include bright pink, blue, purple, white, blue and black, all with the gold pencil. There are also china containers, two for 95 cents, designed to hold ordinary match boxes.

While you're giving your house the spring once-over, why not improve your cigarette-smoking friends' comfort as well by calling EV 3-4111 for name of the store?

It might even help get those ashes off the carpet, once and for all.

Groom's Grandparents Fly Here for Wedding

Rings were exchanged by Patricia Anne Shirley and Richard Anthony Whitehorn when they were married in St. George's Presbyterian Church last Saturday afternoon.

Dr. William J. Klempa officiated at the ceremony for the daughter of Lt.-Cmdr. and Mrs. Albert E. Shirley, 2826 Wyndham Avenue, and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitehorn of Ottawa.

The bride, who entered the church with her father, was lovely in a ballerina-length gown of white brocade, the basque bodice featuring a scoop neckline and cap sleeves. A pert bow accented the back of the softly belled skirt and her puffed veil mistled from a coronet of seed pearls. She carried a hand corsage of red roses and stephanotis and her only jewelry, pearl necklace and earrings, was a gift from the groom.

Mrs. G. Gendre, matron of honor, wore a pale yellow nylon tulle dress with matching head-dress. Her hand corsage was of blue and white carnations. Miss Barbara-Jean Shirley, sister of the bride, wore pale blue nylon tulle over taffeta and her corsage was salmon pink and white. Little Penny Jean Reading was flower girl for her cousin and she wore a pale pink organza dress and pink carnation bandeau. The same flowers were in her hand corsage.

Mr. Norman Brooke was best man and guests were ushered to seats by Michael Shirley, brother of the bride, and Mr. Robert and Mr. Wayne Reading.

Chief PO M. J. Vollet was in charge of arranging the reception held in the wardroom at HMCS Naden. The groom's grandparents, who flew from Ottawa, assisted the bride's parents in receiving guests.

The wedding cake centring the bride's table was made by LC A. Merritt. Mr. Trevor Reading proposed the toast.

After a short honeymoon the young couple will live at 420 Superior Street. The bride's going away costume was a three-piece cotton-knit in French blue with overall pattern in white, white accessories and pink carnation corsage.

She leads guests to the head table in the White House for the state dinner for Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg. White Cane Sale May 10

The White Cane Club of Victoria will hold a tea and sale from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. May 10 at the Canadian Institute for the Blind, Blanshard Street. Home cooking by the blind, needlework and a superfluous stall under Miss Lottie Bowron, will be featured.

The White Cane Club is one of the few clubs in Canada to undertake an overseas project. Money goes toward the blind in Africa and to medical research there, where many of the very young are afflicted.

Six-Hour Blizzard Whips Flin Flon

FLIN FLON (CP) — An 11-inch snowfall whipped by 45-mile-an-hour winds blocked traffic and disrupted communication services Thursday in one of the worst blizzards ever to hit this northern Manitoba mining community.

A three-mile line of cars was left stranded at one point following the six-hour storm which started with sleet about 5:30 a.m.

The town's business area and the Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company's main shafts located on a high rock plateau were inaccessible to traffic until afternoon while traffic out of the town still was blocked Thursday evening.

The weather front, which moved in overnight from Hudson Bay dropped the temperature to eleven degrees from Wednesday's high of 68.

"Okay, I heard that 'Let sleeping dogs lie' crack!"

'Arms for Israel' Jolts Anti-Nuclear Spokesmen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Anti-nuclear weapons spokesmen expressed surprise Wednesday that one of their number has suggested that Israel should have the arms if they are obtained by the neighboring United Arab Republic.

They were commenting on remarks by Rabbi Abraham Feinberg of Toronto, vice-president of the Canadian Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament.

"I can't believe he said that," said Mrs. Olive Johnson, chairman of the B.C. branch and another national vice-president of the campaign.

"He certainly didn't say it on behalf of the campaign because our policy is to oppose the arming of any nations that don't already have nuclear weapons."

She said there is no reason for Israel to get nuclear arms. If the country wanted security it should go to the United Nations.

Rabbi Feinberg said all evidence shows the UAR is being equipped with nuclear rockets.

OPPOSER ARMS

Dr. Brock Chisholm, former head of the World Health Organization, said he opposed arming Israel with the weapons.

The nearness of Israel to an armed UAR would pave the way for accidents.

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, B.C. Hydro co-chairman, said Israel would not be helping peace by obtaining the weapons.

Herter Gives Plan

Across-Board Cuts In Tariffs Proposed

WASHINGTON (CP) — Christian Herter, President Kennedy's chief tariff negotiator, proposed Monday that each Western country agree to "reduce all its tariff rates by a percentage to be agreed upon."

"Of course, each country will have exceptions — items which they feel they must reserve from the uniform tariff reduction," Herter said in disclosing the details of U.S. tariff proposals under Kennedy's trade expansion act.

FEW EXCEPTIONS

"We contend that these exceptions should be kept to a minimum."

Herter spoke before the U.S. Chamber of Commerce annual conference following weekend talks at Ottawa.

Herter said he is pressing ahead to prepare the ground for major free world tariff negotiations next year, with the U.S. offering to reduce its tariffs by up to 50 per cent in return for similar concessions from other countries.

SAVE BARGAINING

He appealed for the across-the-board or linear tariff-reduction approach, to reduce all tariffs by a negotiated percentage. This, he said, will save time at the bargaining table and reduce the possibility that certain countries might get "free rides" in tariff concessions.

Mishap Kills Loader Driver

FERNIE (CP) — Steven Kubos, 40, was killed near here Thursday when a front end loader he was driving rolled down a 90-foot embankment.

A department of highways employee, Kubos rode the machine in its wild ride to the bottom, and was found dead beneath the loader. RCMP said it rolled "end for end and side for side." It came to rest close to the CPR tracks.

B.C. Man Says Son Gives Life to Peace

VANCOUVER (CP) — The father of a young Canadian fined for a one-man demonstration during Prime Minister Pearson's arrival in London this week says his son is devoting a lifetime to peace.

"I would rather have my son sacrifice his life for any cause than be selfishly materialistic," free-lance writer Gunter W. Light said Thursday.

LITTLE FOR PRINCIPLE
"Few things are done on the North American continent for principle."

Peter Light, 20, was fined $1 (about $11.20) for obstructing a police officer and disorderly behaviour. A police constable said he ran forward with two banners for nuclear disarmament as Mr. Pearson left his plane.

The banners were taken from him and Light, Jr., sat down.

In court, he said people have a right to protest that governments have a bomb which could kill "hundreds of millions of people."

He pleaded guilty but refused to pay the fine. He was ordered to spend a day in prison and keep the peace for 12 months.

LEFT UBC

The young man, a nephew of Dr. Norman Alcock, head of the Canadian Peace Research Institute, left biology studies at the University of British Columbia last year to devote himself full-time to the peace movement, his father said.

He bought a mimeograph machine from his savings and put out a news bulletin. Early this year, armed with family allowance money saved by his parents for his education, he left with two Ontario friends for England to continue his crusade.

Strike Vote In Woods Industry

PORTLAND (AP) — The two major woods and lumber workers' unions in the United States northwest are taking strike votes to back up contract demands.

The International Woodworkers of America said it is taking its strike vote among workers employed by the so-called big six lumber products companies — Weyerhaeuser, Crown-Zellerbach, International Paper, U.S. Plywood, St. Regis Paper and Rayonier.

The other union, the Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union, announced it also is taking a strike vote. The LSWU has scheduled talks with the Timber Operators Council May 14-15 in Portland.

Canada's international debt increased to $18,000,000,000 in 1961 from $5,000,000,000 in 1951.

Story Smuggled Out

Fear Stalks Haitians

(The following dispatch was smuggled out of Port-au-Prince and cabled to the United States from outside Haiti, which has imposed strict censorship.)
By GEORGE NATANSON
The Los Angeles Times

PORT-AU-PRINCE — Fear walks the streets of this capital city of Haiti. It is reflected in the rabble-rousing, nearly hysterical speeches of President Francois Duvalier and in the faces of the people.

Reports of wholesale murder and mass arrests are rampant.

Smoke continues to rise from the ruins of two homes here that are said to have been set afire Monday by the dreaded secret police. It is whispered that an entire family suspected of being allied with the opposition was wiped out.

LIVES IN PERIL

Haitians willing to talk remind you that they do so at peril to their lives.

Strict censorship has been imposed on the foreign press. Correspondents are permitted to file dispatches by cable but only if they adhere to what the government considers to be appropriate.

At best cables are delayed by the censors for three to five hours. And outside the censor's office an armed soldier stands guard.

PHONES MONITORED

International telephone calls are closely monitored. Any deviation from the prepared, censored script brings an abrupt end to the conversation.

Duvalier, fearful of the growing opposition which for the first time seriously threatens his six-year regime, is taking harsh security measures. Armed patrols roam the streets at night.

Friends hardly dare speak

Canada's export trade is composed principally of forestry, agricultural and mining products.

to one another, each fearing that the other might be in pay of the Ton Ton Macoute, as Duvalier's private army is called.

I was told most Haitians have no desire to inform on their friends or neighbors, but they fear reprisals against themselves or their families if they fail to do so.

Despite the surface easing of tension, however, there remained an undercurrent of fear and unrest. Opponents of Duvalier have indicated that they will rise against him some time during May.

themselves or their families if they fail to do so.

Despite the surface easing of tension, however, there remained an undercurrent of fear and unrest. Opponents of Duvalier have indicated that they will rise against him some time during May.

Duvalier, in a highly emotional speech to about 10,000 screaming Haitians on the lawn of the presidential palace, raged against the Dominican republic and "misunderstanding" foreigners with cracking voice and wild gestures.

Transfer Demand

Convict, Guard Killed

MONTREAL (CP)—A prisoner and a guard were killed Thursday night at St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary and another prisoner wounded when the two convicts tried to hold the guard as a hostage.

Prison Official:

Stronger Action 'A Must'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Stronger measures must be taken with dangerous inmates in Canadian penitentiaries, deputy penitentiaries commissioner J. R. Stone said Thursday.

The death of a guard in Montreal Thursday, and the threat to another guard's life here two weeks ago, point to a core of prisoners "who refuse to conform to authority."

"It has become obvious that in our old prisons under present overcrowded conditions, we cannot control the psychopathic section of prisoners even under maximum security conditions," he said.

He estimated the hard core at 25 per cent of the population of existing maximum security prisons.

Warden Michel Lecorre said the convicts tried to bargain for a transfer to Manitoba's Stony Mountain penitentiary by holding guard Raymond Teller, 35, at knife-point.

Other guards rushed the prisoners and shot them, but Teller died in hospital shortly afterwards of the stab wounds.

The dead convict is Claude Marcoux, 21, who had three years to go on a five-year sentence.

COUNCIL WOUNDED

In hospital with a bullet in his arm is Marcel Marcoux, 34, a cousin of Claude's, who has four years to serve of a 10-year sentence. Both were in prison for armed robbery.

Mr. Lecorre said the whole incident took no more than 20 minutes.

The convicts had left their cells to get supper and were on their way back when the two men grabbed Teller and pulled him into a cell.

GUARD ARMED

Teller was not armed. Mr. Lecorre said guards working on such patrols inside the cells do not carry arms for fear the prisoners might seize weapons.

The Marcoux cousins demanded that they be transferred and gave prison authorities 15 minutes to make up their minds. They also demanded

300 CHILDREN RESCUED

Airlift in North Pressed

By ED TREFIK

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP)—Three hundred children and two dozen hospital patients were plucked from danger Thursday as an air evacuation of two island communities in Canada's northland barreled forward.

The communities, with a combined population of 2,500, have been under siege by the rambling Mackenzie River system, clogged with ice and swollen by the spring thaw.

RCAF and civilian helicopters, small and large planes, amphibious transporters and boats were thrown into the battle against the angry waters.

HUGE ICE CHUNKS

Huge chunks of ice, powered by the swollen Hay River, have devastated this town of 1,800. More than 30 per cent of the island was under water and it was expected that by nightfall all women and children would be evacuated.

An ice jam backed up water at Fort Simpson and for the first time in memory flooded the community, built on an island where the Land River empties into the mighty Mackenzie.

CHILDREN AIRLIFTED

It was at Fort Simpson, 625 miles north of Edmonton, that the children and the patients were whisked to safety by a medium-sized RCAF helicopter. It shuttled between the town and a government airport on the mainland one mile away, carrying 14 to 18 passengers on each trip.

In both cases, rivers swollen by the spring thaw at their headwaters in northern British Columbia were plugged by ice jams as they flowed northward and hit still frozen regions. The Mackenzie system empties in the Arctic Ocean.

CLEAR, COLD

Weather Thursday at both points was clear and cold with a morning reading of about 10 degrees.

C. L. Merrill of Fort Smith, northern affairs administrator for the Mackenzie district, said a report from Fort Simpson was received at 3 p.m. MST via forestry radio.

"It was pretty skimpy but we do know that 300 children have been taken off the island and are safe at the mainland airport. Also 24 patients are on the way to Fort Smith, but we don't know when they are to arrive."

NEVER BEFORE

He said the town has never been known to flood in previous years.

"It was a flash flood. There was no where for the water to go once it began to back up. Once it began to look danger-

Need a Copter? Just Call Jack

By DAVE COLVILLE
Special to the Colonist

HAY RIVER, N.W.T.—Every town has its man of the hour, and in Hay River it's Cpl. Jack Hunter of the RCMP.

Lost your children in a flooded town? Call Jack. Need a helicopter to get you out of a danger zone? Call Jack.

Jack hasn't had a prisoner in his cell block since the icy waters of the Hay River swept through the town several days ago, but he's had more guests and visitors than at any time since he joined the force.

For three days now Cpl. Hunter has lived on chocolate bars, coffee and soft drinks—and the telephone has rarely been away from his ear.

In addition to everything else, he has become a general store keeper for the town. With all stores closed he requisitions what he wants for the needs of flood workers and hopes the government will pick up the tab.

But he isn't the only hero in town. Dr. Cherer Penny, a quiet red-haired man, is the only physician and surgeon in town. Since the ice flows swept down the main street and once lapped the front steps of his hospital, he's been sleeping on his operating table.

He has already inoculated most of the town's population against typhoid and is now planning his campaign to keep his large family healthy when the flood waters subside.

"We'll have an enormous problem with health then," he says quietly. "Outside toilets and flooded septic tanks have strewn the town with fecal matter. It's difficult to know just how we'll solve that problem."

Dr. Penny receives his highest praise for Bill Napier, supervisor of Northland Utilities, and his electrical crew. Under abominable conditions they rigged up a special emergency power line to the hospital, after huge ice-flows took the main line out.

The same crew also rigged an emergency telephone line to connect vital points of command in the shattered town.

Udall Hopeful

WASHINGTON (AP)—Interior Secretary Stewart Udall said Thursday he is hopeful the new Canadian government will ratify the proposed Columbia River treaty, which has been approved by the United States Senate.

Fright Peddlers of 'Right' Do Devil's Work—Senator

WASHINGTON (UPI)—California Republican Senator Thomas Kuchel said Thursday that extremist right-wing "fright peddlers" are circulating a series of hoaxes designed to "scare the daylights out of decent Americans."

The Senate Republican whip charged in a speech on the Senate floor that spokesmen for such groups as the John Birch Society and others "are doing a devil's work far better than Communists could do."

They are not only frightening many decent Americans, Kuchel said, but they also "defile the honorable philosophy of conservatism" as thoroughly as the Communists defile the honorable philosophy of liberalism.

WINS COMMENDATION

Kuchel won bipartisan commendation from senators of both parties for his speech.

But the Kuchel speech drew a sharp reply in the House from Rep. James B. Utt, also a California Republican, who called it a "brazen attempt to smear millions of patriotic Americans by innuendo."

The Congressman said in a statement: "It is beneath the dignity of a United States senator to impugn the patriotism of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Legion, the Elks Club and all other patriotic organizations."

NO MENTION Kuchel did not mention the DAR, the Legion or the Elks in his speech.

Kuchel cited several examples of "hoaxes and swindles" he said were being perpetrated by the ultra right wingers:

• The false charge that the United Nations is training thousands of foreign troops, including "bar-footed Africans," in Georgia as a first step toward a takeover of the United States.

• An equally false allegation

Wind, Ice Decide Fate

(Special to the Colonist)

HAY RIVER, N.W.T.—When will the troubles be over for this small township in Canada's north country?

Harry Clark, in his late 60s, who has been in Hay River since its inception, says May 28 when the ice goes out of Great Slave Lake.

Harry says it all depends on the winds. If they steady in one direction, the break-up of ice is reasonably orderly. If they shift back and forth, as they have this year, "Look out, the ice breaks like a kid snapping a toffee bar and you've got trouble like we have now."

The big worry of the oldtimers in the area is that plans to make Hay River an eventual railhead town will now be abandoned.

"Railroads are funny," says Harry. "A thing like this and they may decide not to bring the railways here at all."

100 Flee Rampaging Peace

EDMONTON (CP)—More than 100 persons have been evacuated from the small northern British Columbia sawmill community of Sweetgrass Landing, flooded by the rampaging Peace River.

Al Knudson, a foreman at the settlement's sawmill and one of the last persons to be evacuated, said on arrival at Edmonton Airport Thursday the Peace River had spilled over its banks Monday. Flood waters swept away more than 30 buildings and covered the community with up to 10 feet of water.

Evacuation started Tuesday and the last residents were flown out Thursday.

Mr. Knudson said residents piled their furniture and other valuables on makeshift rafts.

"There's rafts with fridges, stoves, beds and everything else floating around the camp," he said.

Almost all the residents were sawmill employees.

Mr. Knudson said there has been no estimate of damage. Sweetgrass Landing is 250 miles northwest of Edmonton.

Floods Threatening In New Brunswick

FREDERICTON, N.B. (UPI)—Concern mounted Thursday over the rapidly-rising water level of the St. John River.

The New Brunswick Water Authority said the river had reached "a critical point" and a several-foot increase was predicted for Friday.

The river has overflowed its banks, covering sections of the Trans-Canada Highway between Fredericton and Jemseg on the main route to Sussex and Moncton. At Fredericton, water was inching toward the city's downtown section.

Scout Troop Akin to Swiss Navy

ALBERNI — Beaver Creek Scout troop has something in common with the Swiss navy. The 13-boy troop, eight miles from the nearest large body of water, has acquired a 26-foot craft and is repairing it in preparation for a summer-time launching.

Since buying the whaler last fall the Scouts, under direction of Scoutmaster Henry Somers, have built a boathouse and have started on the project of scraping and patching the craft. Painting and sail making are other crafts to be practised before the Scouts will be waterborne.

Plans are to use the boat on Great Central and Spruce Lakes and, as the troop gains experience in handling it, on Alberni Inlet. A 10-horsepower engine will provide auxiliary power for the sailboat which has a dinghy for side trips when the troop goes on excursions.

The work of building the boathouse gave the boys and some of their fathers a new experience. The building was framed with poles cut on the Scouts' own property. Along with the axe-work and the fitting of joists, studs and rafters, there was the job of mixing concrete for the foundation blocks.

Funds from the troop's apple day and from two bottle drives have covered the costs of the boat purchase and lumber for sheathing the building.

The Beaver Creek boys bought their vessel, a craft weighing three-quarters of a ton and with a six-foot beam, from Second Arrowworth Troop which now has three similar boats in service. The Alberni troop has had many deep-water expeditions in their whalers.

Although the Beaver Creek Scout Troop's headquarters are far from the water, Scoutmaster Somers says that there will be no trouble in transporting their boat by trailer.

Six new members are to be admitted to the troop from the district's Cub pack prior to the launching and they will join the older boys as they learn to sail and navigate.

Mr. Somers now has two assistant scoutmasters, Larry and Richard Cree, both of whom started their Scouting careers in Beaver Creek. Bruce Somers and Gregory Eaton are patrol leaders.

Boys Work for Fund

DUNCAN — Cowichan Valley Boy Scouts are making big strides toward their $2,000 fund-raising goal, and so far $1,500 has been taken in.

Under the chairmanship of Mrs. E. L. Gilman of Maple Bay, a uniform pool was established where Scouts and Cubs buy or sell uniforms. The new Scoutmaster of the 1st Quamichan troop is Cpl. W. W. Holmes, who had been transferred from Victoria.

Cpl. Holmes has been connected with the Boy Scout movement for many years and was previously stationed at Regina. Vivian Marshall of Maple Bay is new Cubmaster of the 1st Quamichan Cub.

During March, the Scouts set a new record for this area. Sixty-seven boys were awarded badges and 10 Scouts received the Queen's Scout badge. Scouts from British Columbia, as in previous years, will represent the province at the annual sailing regatta at Montserrat next August. The boys will be selected at Vancouver at the end of this month.

Recreation Parley at Courtenay

COURTENAY — First days of the B.C. recreation conference saw 150 delegates register for the three-day meet.

Dan Campbell, MLA for Comox, opened the conference.

Sessions Thursday dealt with planning recreation for small communities; layout and parks design by H. Berger, West Vancouver; volunteer leadership by Dr. R. Ramsey; physical fitness, Keith Maltman; teenage activities, Len Ryan; do-it-yourself recreation equipment, Gordon Maxwell.

A tour of the RCAF base at Comox was enjoyed by delegates.

Thursday's program ended with a banquet and dance.

ALBERNI — Need for a health centre in Alberni was emphasized in a letter from the director of Central Vancouver Island Health Unit read at council meeting Monday night.

Council was asked if plans are being made to provide a building.

Ald. George Dunbar said that the letter should be answered in the affirmative. Study of the matter will continue.

According to a report at the meeting, sewerage mains are 98 per cent completed under the contract with Interior Contracting Ltd.

Permission was granted to the Salvation Army, Alberni Valley Corps, to hold the annual Red Shield campaign during the month of May. A grant of $125 was made to the Salvation Army in line with previous policy.

A contract for erecting a prefabricated dwelling for the SPCA inspector was awarded to Danzo & Franco, who submitted the low tender in the amount of $3,275.

COURTENAY — The 40-foot trolley Monami, owned by Reginald Holland, Parksville, is on the ways after being floated by Pat Houlgrave.

Mr. Holland's boat ran aground in the harbor, heeled over and filled when the tide rose. The vessel, still filled, was towed to the float on Comox Wharf where it was tied with the bow sticking out of the water. The stern was raised with block and tackle and, when the gunwales were above the surface, the craft was pumped dry and towed up-river.

Cost of restoring the $15,000 vessel is estimated at $2,000.

Duncan Man Finds Change

DUNCAN — Duncan Rotarian Rj Mayo recently addressed his club on his world tour which took him to the birthplace of his parents at Punjab and to Japan, Hong Kong, Australia, Egypt, Germany, Belgium and France.

Mr. Mayo said on his last visit to Punjab in 1952 he drove through a bleak desert country which since then has been transformed into fertile land through irrigation.

He was amazed to find this same 600-mile stretch of land interlaced with irrigation ditches and he explained this miracle was the result of large dams financed by British, Indian and American capital. Mr. Mayo said sugar cane, there grows in abundance, 15 feet tall.

DUNCAN — Funeral services were conducted recently for Joseph Skoda, who died at the Mary Moore Salvation Army home and hospital April 30, aged 78 years.

Convict, Guard Killed

MONTREAL (CP)—A prisoner and a guard were killed Thursday night at St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary and another prisoner wounded when the two convicts tried to hold the guard as a hostage.

Prison Official:

Stronger Action 'A Must'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Stronger measures must be taken with dangerous inmates in Canadian penitentiaries, deputy penitentiaries commissioner J. R. Stone said Thursday.

The death of a guard in Montreal Thursday, and the threat to another guard's life here two weeks ago, point to a core of prisoners "who refuse to conform to authority."

"It has become obvious that in our old prisons under present overcrowded conditions, we cannot control the psychopathic section of prisoners even under maximum security conditions," he said.

He estimated the hard core at 25 per cent of the population of existing maximum security prisons.

Warden Michel Lecorre said the convicts tried to bargain for a transfer to Manitoba's Stony Mountain penitentiary by holding guard Raymond Teller, 35, at knife-point.

Other guards rushed the prisoners and shot them, but Teller died in hospital shortly afterwards of the stab wounds. The dead convict is Claude Marcoux, 21, who had three years to go on a five-year sentence.

COUSIN WOUNDED

In hospital with a bullet in his arm is Marcel Marcoux, 34, a cousin of Claude's, who has four years to serve of a 10-year sentence. Both were in prison for armed robbery.

Mr. Lecorre said the whole incident took no more than 20 minutes.

The convicts had left their cells to get supper and were on their way back when the two men grabbed Teller and pulled him into a cell.

GUARD UNARMED

Teller was not armed. Mr. Lecorre said guards working on such patrols inside the cells do not carry arms for fear the prisoners might seize weapons.

The Marcoux cousins demanded that they be transferred and gave prison authorities 15 minutes to make up their minds. They also demanded

Evacuation Almost Over

By ED TREFIK

HAY RIVER, N.W.T. (CP)—More than 1,100 persons were moved by air to safety Thursday from two island communities on the Mackenzie River system, cut off from the mainland by rampaging spring torrents and massive ice jams.

The evacuees included 400 residents of Hay River and the 750 residents of Fort Simpson. Previously 222 Hay River people had been moved out.

VIRTUALLY COMPLETED

At nightfall, 10 p.m. MST, Mayor W. R. McBryan reported the evacuation of all who intended to leave Hay River, 508 miles north of Edmonton, had been virtually completed. About 1,200 of the town's 1,800 citizens remained.

"Apart from one more plane load to go out Friday morning, all that are going have gone," he said.

ONE-MILE HOP

Meagre reports reaching Fort Smith from Fort Simpson, 625 miles north of Edmonton, indicated all residents had made the one-mile hop by helicopter from the flooded community to safety at an airport on the mainland. Many, including a large number of children and two dozen hospital patients, had been moved on to Fort Smith and Yellowknife.

C. L. Merrill of Fort Smith, northern affairs administrator for the Mackenzie district, said at 9:30 p.m. he understood flying had been suspended for the night. Further flights would start at 4:30 a.m.—first light.

BATTLE ANGEY WATERS

RCAP and civilian helicopters, small and large planes, amphibious transports, outboard motor boats and canoes were thrown into the battle with the angry waters.

Huge chunks of ice, driven before the flood, had devastated Hay River. More than 90 per cent of the island was under water.

OVER ISLAND

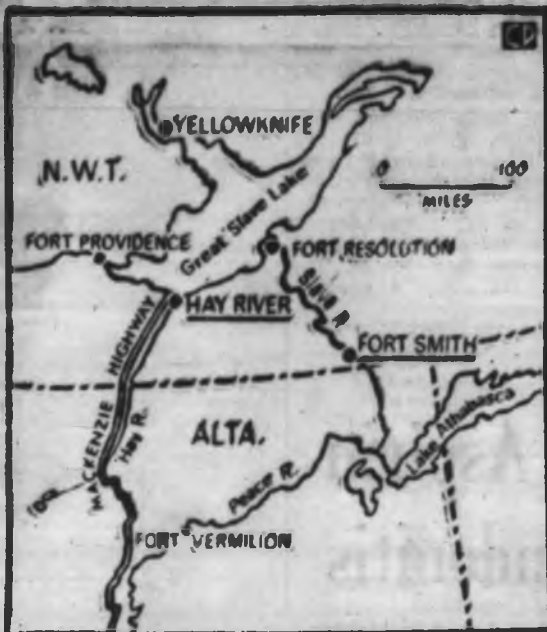

At Fort Simpson, an ice jam backed water over the island community for the first time in memory.

In both cases, rivers swollen by the spring thaw at their headwaters in British Columbia were plugged by ice jams as they flowed northward and hit still frozen regions of the Mackenzie system which empties into the Arctic Ocean.

Mr. Merrill said Fort Simpson had not been flooded in previous years.

"It was a flash flood. There was no where for the water to go once it began to back up. Once it began to look dangerous

HAY RIVER, N.W.T.—Every town has its man of the hour, and in Hay River it's Cpl. Jack Hunter of the RCMP.

Lost your children in a flooded town? Call Jack. Need a helicopter to get you out of a danger zone? Call Jack.

Jack hasn't had a prisoner in his cell block since the icy waters of the Hay River swept through the town several days ago, but he's had more guests and visitors than at any time since he joined the force.

For three days now Cpl. Hunter has lived on chocolate bars, coffee and soft drinks—and the telephone has rarely been away from his ear.

In addition to everything else, he has become a general store keeper for the town. With all stores closed he requisitions what he wants for the needs of flood workers and hopes the government will pick up the tab.

But he isn't the only hero in town.

Dr. Cherer Penny, a quiet red-haired man, is the only physician and surgeon in town. Since the ice flows swept down the main street and once lapped the front steps of his hospital, he's been sleeping on his operating table.

He has already inoculated most of the town's population against typhoid and is now planning his campaign to keep his large family healthy when the flood waters subside.

"We'll have an enormous problem with health then," he says quietly. "Outside toilets and flooded septic tanks have strewn the town with fecal matter. It's difficult to know just how we'll solve that problem."

Dr. Penny receives his highest praise for Sam Napier, supervisor of Northland Utilities, and his electrical crew. Under abominable conditions they rigged up a special emergency power line to the hospital, after huge ice flows took the main line out.

The same crew also rigged an emergency telephone line to connect vital points of command in the shattered town.

Udall Hopeful

WASHINGTON (AP)—Interior Secretary Stewart Udall said Thursday he is hopeful the new Canadian government will ratify the proposed Columbia River treaty, which has been approved by the United States Senate.

Wind, Ice Decide Fate

(Special to the Colonist)

HAY RIVER, N.W.T.—When will the troubles be over for this small township in Canada's north country?

Harry Clark, in his late 60s, who has been in Hay River since its inception, says May 28 when the ice goes out of Great Slave Lake.

Harry says it all depends on the winds. If they steady in one direction, the break-up of ice is reasonably orderly. If they shift back and forth, as they have this year, "Look out, the ice breaks like a kid snapping a toffee bar and you've got trouble like we have, now."

The big worry of the oldtimers in the area is that plans to make Hay River an eventual railroad town will now be abandoned.

"Railroads are funny," says Harry. "A thing like this and they may decide not to bring the railways here at all."

100 Flee Rampaging Peace

EDMONTON (CP)—More than 100 persons have been evacuated from the small northern British Columbia sawmill community of Sweetgrass Landing, flooded by the rampaging Peace River.

Al Knudson, a foreman at the settlement's sawmill and one of the last persons to be evacuated, said on arrival at Edmonton Airport Thursday the Peace River had spilled over its banks Monday.

Flood waters swept away more than 30 buildings and covered the community with up to 10 feet of water.

Evacuation started Tuesday and the last residents were flown out Thursday.

Mr. Knudson said residents piled their furniture and other valuables on makeshift rafts.

"There's rafts with fridges, stoves, beds and everything else floating around the camp," he said.

Almost all the residents were sawmill employees.

Mr. Knudson said there has been no estimate of damage.

Sweetgrass Landing is 250 miles northwest of Edmonton.

Floods Threatening In New Brunswick

Ferdinand Demara, known as "great impostor," has submitted "no contest" plea to charge of using mails to defraud. Grand jury charged Demara used fictitious name and supplied false records to obtain high school teaching post in Massachusetts.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—California Republican Senator Thomas Kuchel said Thursday that extremist right-wing "fright peddlers" are circulating a series of hoaxes designed to "scare the daylights out of decent Americans."

The Senate Republican whip charged in a speech on the Senate floor that spokesmen for such groups as the John Birch Society and others "are doing a devil's work far better than Communists could do."

They are not only frightening many decent Americans, Kuchel said, but they also "defile the honorable philosophy of conservatism... as thoroughly as the Communists defile the honorable philosophy of liberalism."

WINS COMMENDATION

Kuchel won bipartisan commendation from senators of both parties for his speech.

But the Kuchel speech drew a sharp reply in the House from Rep. James B. Utt, also a Californian Republican, who called it a "brazen attempt to smear millions of patriotic Americans by innuendo."

The Congressman said in a statement: "It is beneath the dignity of a United States senator to impugn the patriotism of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Legion, the Elks Club and all other patriotic organizations."

NO MENTION

Kuchel did not mention the DAR, the Legion or the Elks in his speech.

Kuchel cited several examples of "hoaxes and swindles" he said were being perpetrated by the ultra right wingers.

The false charge that the United Nations is training thousands of foreign troops, including "barefooted Africans," in Georgia as a first step toward a takeover of the United States.

MONTREAL (CP)—A prisoner and a guard were killed Thursday night at St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary and another prisoner wounded when the two convicts tried to hold the guard as a hostage.
